Rest in Trenches Before Verdun, Says French Official Report

ARTILLERY ACTIVE ON MOST OF FRONT

New Move in Woivre District Is Indicated

AIR CORPS IS ACTIVE

Railroad Station at Conflans Fired By Air Bombs—French Claim Capture of 200 Yards of Trenches Near St. Mihiel—British Lose 5,000 in Tigris Battle, Repulsed in Arabia.

A pronounced pause has come in the German offensive operations against Verdun, so far as the infantry arm is concerned, according to the official bulletins from Paris.

Sunday passed without infantry advances and the crown prince's troops did not leave their trenches for an attack at any point during last night, the French war office reports.

There has been no cessation of the artillery play, however, the bombardment continuing along much of the front. It was particularly severe in the Woivre district, where the French guns have been searching out hostile positions, indicating the probability that some move by the Germans to the east or southeast of the fortress, on the French right flank, is anticipated.

A small engagement occurred in Le Pretre forest, on the left bank of the Moselle, west of Pont-A-Mousson, to the east of the St. Mihiel salient, where the French report penetrating 200 yards of trenches and withdrawing after destroying the German saps.

French aviators bombarded the railroad station at Conflans, where fire was seen to break out.

Reports come from Dutch sources that the Dutch-Belgian frontier, which has been closed for several weeks coincident with the Verdun offensive, has been reported at one point. This is commented on in Holland, according to a news agency dispatch through London, as probably indicating that the Germans consider their offensive near an end.

The British Mesopotamian force under General Aylmer suffered casualties of five thousand in the battle of March 8, when it tried to advance up the Tigris towards Kut-el-Amara and was reported defeated and obliged to retreat, according to an estimate by the Turkish war office.

In Arabia, according to Constantinople, a British force trying to advance inland from the Gulf of Aden was driven back by the Turks to the protection of the warships in the gulf.

Today's Berlin headquarters statement on the Verdun operations confirms the French report of the comparative quiet prevailing around Verdun. Considerable artillery activity, however, is mentioned, this increasing in intensity on both banks of the Meuse.

Berlin declares the French attack in Le Pretre forest was a failure.

German aviators have bombarded railway stations and military depots in the Verdun region, while in the Champagne region two French aeroplanes were brought down, besides one in the Meuse region.

BRITISH LOSSES 5,000.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM) Berlin, March 13.—By Wireless to Sayville.—The losses of the British forces in Mesopotamia battle near Felahie are estimated by the Turkish war office at least five thousand.

ATTACK FROM AIR?

(ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM) Paris, March 13.—The first officer of the Norwegian bark Silius is quoted by the Paris Herald as expressing the opinion that a vessel may have been struck by a bomb from an aeroplane, instead of by a torpedo as previously reported.

The first officer was on watch at the time and heard a noise which he thought was made by an aeroplane, although he could see none. Then there came a terrific explosion at about the middle of the ship on the starboard side. A huge wave swept over the vessel.

A French torpedo boat took all survivors on board. The officers of the torpedo boat came to the conclusion that the Silius on which there were several Americans had been struck by a torpedo from a submarine.

VERDUN LINE QUIET.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM) Paris, March 13.—2:32 p. m.—There was no infantry fighting last night in the region to the north of Verdun according to the announcement on the progress of hostilities made by the French war office this afternoon. There has been, however, a continuance of the artillery activity along all this front.

NAMED BY HOOSIER G. O. P. FOR SENATE

Harry S. New.

In the recent state wide primary in Indiana Harry S. New was nominated by the Republicans for United States senator. He will be opposed by Senator John W. Kern in the November elections.

"MEX" BULLETINS BOILED DOWN

(ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM) Washington.—Senator Borah, Republican, urged the senate today to immediately consider national preparedness program in view of consequences that might arise from the decision to pursue General Villa in Mexico.

Washington.—Chairman Chamberlain told the senate that in his opinion the United States army did not have enough soldiers to cope with Mexico.

El Paso.—Troops of Mexican cavalry have been dispatched from Laguna on the line of the Old Mexican Central railway north of Chihuahua City direct to Casas Grandes to aid the 800 members of the Mormon colony.

Philadelphia.—Twenty carloads of clothing and equipment to supply the needs of 10,000 United States soldiers in a campaign in Mexico, were shipped late last night from the Schuylkill arsenal here to the Mexican border.

San Francisco.—An embargo on shipments of war munitions to Mexican points was declared today.

El Paso.—A report that Juan Bilbao, an American cattleman of El Paso, is being held in northern Mexico for $1500 ransom was received today.

"Tod" Raper Dies In Columbus; Funeral Tuesday

Columbus, O., March 13.—F. S. Raper, popular member of the editorial staff of the Columbus Dispatch died at his home, Twelfth and Indiana avenues on Saturday afternoon. Known to his associates and friends as "Tod" Raper, he had during his eleven years as a newspaper writer in Columbus, extended his influence beyond the city of Columbus. Through his solicitations each year was the annual baby camp made a possibility for Columbus, and he also directed all the booklovers' contests for the Dispatch. Funeral services will be held Tuesday, at 2 o'clock, at the First M. E. church, 12th and Madisona avenues. It will be a Masonic funeral.

PORTUGAL KEPT AGREEMENT TO AID HER ALLY

Washington, March 13.—Portugal entered the war, the Portuguese legation announced today, because Great Britain requested her to do so, in fulfillment of treaty obligations dating back to 1373. Portugal did not enter the war before, the Portuguese minister announced, because Great Britain had not called on her to do so.

A statement outlining Portugal's position, issued by Viscount De Alte, the Portuguese minister, reads as follows: "Portugal is drawn into the war as a result of her long standing alliance with England, an alliance that has withstood unbroken the strain of 500 years.

"In these circumstances, Portugal could not refuse her aid to her ancient ally who has now called upon her to fulfill her treaty obligations. She is ready to stand or fall by the principals for which the British empire is fighting."

GERARD GETS VACATION.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM) Washington, March 13.—Word has gone to American Ambassador James W. Gerard at Berlin authorizing him to leave his post for a vacation. It is considered not unlikely that he may go to Switzerland instead of coming home. The ambassador recently sustained a painful injury while participating in winter sports and has not fully recovered from its effects. State department officials say there is absolutely no political significance in the granting of a leave to Mr. Gerard at this time.

DELAY

Of Mexican Operations Due to Lack of Railroad Facilities

TROOPS WON'T ADVANCE TODAY

Brig.-Gen. Pershing to Decide When Force Starts

MOBILIZE AT COLUMBUS

Probable That Scene of Recent Raid Will Be Base of Operations—Washington Considers Carranza's Proposal—Probable That the Chase of Villa Will Consume Several Months.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM) Washington, March 13.—The United States this afternoon accepted General Carranza's proposal for a reciprocal arrangement by which either his troops or American troops may pursue bandits on either side of the border. A formal compliance was sent forward to General Carranza at Queretaro.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM) San Antonio, Tex., March 13.—No movement of the expeditionary force that will search for Francisco Villa is probable today, Major General Funston announced this morning. The general said preparations for the expedition were going on, despite General Carranza's notification to the Washington government that he would not consent to American troops entering Mexico unless Carranza troops were allowed to enter the United States.

Gen. Funston said the announcement of the expedition's actual start into Mexico probably would come from General Pershing to whom would be left the decision as to the exact hour for setting the movement afoot.

Shortage of rolling stock, General Funston said, was hindering the concentration of cavalry at the base of operations and this was one reason why a movement today was unlikely. The fault, he said, lay with the railroads west of El Paso.

"We have even had to transport men in box cars," he declared. "If this had been merely an infantry expedition we could have been into Mexico on Villa's very heels, but this is largely a cavalry movement and that is why there has been delay."

Light was thrown on the size of the expeditionary force by the general, who said:

"When this movement is completed there will be only six or eight regiments left in the United States other than those troops stationed along the border for patrol duty."

The first aero squadron, Captain Benjamin D. Foulois Commanding went to El Paso this morning. The developments in the Mexican situation will not affect the citizens training camp to be held here from June 12 to July 8. At army headquarters it was reported that the turn of affairs had stimulated interest in the camp and that applications for registration were pouring in daily.

General Funston is being deluged with applications from persons who want to act as interpreters for the expedition. He said "every man in Texas able to speak three words of Spanish, has applied for duty."

It was officially announced that Brigadier-General John P. Pershing will command the expeditionary forces.

General Funston said he had received no notification from Washington to hold back the expedition while negotiations were being completed with General Carranza.

CARRANZA'S

Proposal Probably Will be Accepted by This Government on Certain Conditions.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM) Washington, March 13.—The United States will reply to General Carranza's request for a reciprocal agreement for crossings of troops at the Mexican border late today after Secretary Lansing has conferred with President Wilson. It was indicated today that Carranza's proposal would be accepted.

The acceptance probably will be made on the ground that Carranza troops may cross into American territory in pursuit of bandits at any time that American forces are not present in sufficient numbers. It will be pointed out that the inability of the Carranza troops to handle the situation in northern Mexico is the sole ground for entry of American soldiers.

In that way American officials expect the situation will be relieved of its chief menacing feature. They expressed the view today that a great deal of unnecessary pessimism exists as to General Carranza's attitude. As to the attitude of the Mexican people, themselves, however, there is some concern, but it is realized that only the developments of (Continued on Page 9, Col. 3.)

German Losses in Attack on Fort Vaux Heaviest of War; Foothold in Village Costly

(ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM) Paris, March 13, 5:40 a. m.—The German losses in the fighting around Fort Vaux last Friday and Saturday surpass all previous records in this war, according to officers who have returned from Verdun. Time and time again and with extraordinary courage, the Germans in columns four deep rushed from their trenches only to melt away under the fire of the French 75's and 210 millimetre guns, which rained shells with deadly accuracy into the marching companies. When the smoke and dust cleared nothing was to be seen but heaps of bodies.

The spur on which the fort is situated is almost perpendicular in certain places. The German lines were forced to halt, but many Bavarian reservists climbed up on one another's shoulders and struggled up the steep, clinging to angles of rock and grasping tufts of grass. Again and again these places where the incline was easier and the attacks, therefore, more concentrated the ditches below ran red with blood. At the lowest estimate the attackers lost two-thirds of their effectives.

The fighting also was desperate in the extreme when regiments from the fifteenth and eighteenth German army corps attacked the Village of Vaux on Friday. Dawn was just breaking and over the country hung a heavy white mist, making everything invisible beyond a hundred yards. This enabled the Germans to get within rushing distance of the French front trenches, but although they cut numbered the defenders six to one, it took four distinct assaults before the first column of Germans won the shelter of a small group of houses behind the church of Vaux. They then organized an assault upon the church. The French, being unable to bring up reinforcements on account of a certain fire, withdrew after advanced elements were in danger of being surrounded.

Five times the Prussian regiments rushed to attack the church but every time they left the shelter of the ruined houses they were beaten back by the fire from the machine guns and the shrapnel from the French 58 millimetre mountain guns. In the meantime in their rear a curtain of fire was kept up by the French 75's and 210's so that it was impossible for munitions and reinforcements to be brought up for their benefit and the fight died down on Friday night from sheer exhaustion.

FRONTIER REOPENED.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM) London, March 13.—An Amsterdam despatch to the Central News says that on account of the German offensive at Verdun the Dutch frontier had been closed for several weeks. The part of it south of Maas-tricht has now been re-opened and this fact is commented on in Holland as probably indicating that the Germans consider their offensive near an end.

Reports to the government authorities indicated that the Matatua would prove a total loss.

SELF DEFENSE TO BE PLEA OF WERTZ; SHOT AND KILLED GEO. STEVENS IN QUARREL

Charge from Shot Gun Ends Career of Man Who Eloped With Employer's Daughter—Tragedy Enacted Upon the Same Farm Where Mrs. Frances Wertz Was Murdered Nearly Eleven Years Ago—Slayer Is Lodged in the County Jail

AFFIDAVIT CHARGES MURDER; ENTERS PLEA OF NOT GUILTY

Wife of Dead Man, Formerly Helen Wertz, Tells Marital Troubles Which Developed Soon After Her Elopement With Stevens Early In January—Father Had Just Returned From Newark After Discussing Divorce Action With His Attorney—Incidents Surrounding Case.

James "Bud" Wertz pleaded not guilty to a charge of first degree murder in Justice Fletcher S. Scott's court this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the affidavit having been filed against him by Sheriff Chas. H. Swank.

Justice Scott named Thursday afternoon at one o'clock as the time for the hearing and remanded Wertz to jail without bond.

George Stevens, twenty-five years of age, was shot and killed, Saturday afternoon about two o'clock by his brother-in-law, James Wertz. The shooting occurred on the Jack Wertz farm, two miles west of the Dry Creek bridge, on what is known as the creek road. The instrument of death was a double-barrel breech-loading shot gun, the shells being loaded with buckshot.

The Wertz home is on the south side of the road and back in the yard about forty feet. It is a two-story frame building of nine rooms. There is a small porch on the front of the house and another in the southeast corner, an "L" occurring there. Back of this porch about ten feet is a small elm tree. A barn stands back of the house a short distance west and near this is a straw shed, which can be used to house sick. There is also a coal shed and a chicken house in the near vicinity.

The first intimation of the shooting reached this city shortly before three o'clock when a neighbor of the Wertz family called up Sheriff Chas. H. Swank and informed him that there had been trouble on the Wertz farm and that some one had been shot. The Sheriff with Deputy Frank Brown jumped in a machine and started for the scene of the shooting. When within a short distance of the place they met Dr. Carl Evans who had been called to the Wertz home by telephone. The doctor stated that when he arrived he found no one at home and stumbled on the corpse of a man who had been shot. He examined him and after finding life extinct left to call some one to care for the body. He was on that errand when he met the officers and turned and accompanied them to the Wertz home.

On arrival at the Wertz home the occupants had returned after having gone to a neighbors after the shooting. Sheriff Swank found the body lying near the back porch with a gaping wound in the abdomen, in fact shot were scattered all over the body. The head of the dead man was within a few feet of the tree in the back yard and the feet pointed toward the porch. Sheriff Swank stated that Jack Wertz was standing near and that he was intoxicated. The Sheriff asked "Where is Bud," and Jack replied, "He's in the house, I'll go and get him."

The Sheriff stated that he told Jack to never mind that he would go in and get him himself. He then went into the house and found Bud in the kitchen. The Sheriff asked him why he had shot Stevens and "Bud" replied: "He was choking Helen in the bed room and I interfered. We quarreled and he ran out of the house. I knew that he had taken the butcher knife out the cupboard and so I grabbed the gun. He was coming toward me when I got out on the porch. He had the knife in his hand and I pulled the gun up and shot and he dropped. I saw that he was done for and we all left for the neighbors."

Shortly after Sheriff Swank and Deputy Brown left the city, Coroner W. L. Jackson, Prosecutor J. W. Horner and an Advocate representative left in the T. A. Bazler ambulance for the scene of the shooting. Arriving there additional facts were learned regarding the killing.

George Stevens, the murdered man, claimed Newark as his home and always gave his age as twenty-five, although it is believed that he was several years older. He and "Bud" Wertz became acquainted while confined in the county jail a year ago last January, Stevens having been committed to prison for trespassing on the B. & O. railway. Justice Fletcher S. Scott, his attorney, being ten dollars and costs, and Stevens having no money was compelled to go to prison. He was a member of a gang of fellows who were living in old abandoned cars at Vanatta and foraging from farmers in the near vicinity, the latest making the complaint.

At the same time young Wertz was serving a jail sentence at six months for assault and battery upon Charles Starr, the old harness maker at the Aispach shop in Church street. While confined in prison the two boys became very good friends and Wertz had Stevens write letters to his sister Helen for him. In that way Stevens and the girl became acquainted and their sentences expiring about the same time young Wertz had Stevens accompany him to the home of his parents where he remained and assisted in the farm work. He made love to Helen, then a girl of fifteen and shortly after her sixteenth birthday, on January 10th of this year, they eloped and were married at Columbus, O. The father and brother endeavored to apprehend the young people but were not successful and after their marriage the couple returned to the Wertz farm and were given a home but a coolness sprang up between the male members of the family and Stevens.

The shooting, according to the story told the Advocate representative by members of the Wertz family was the climax to a series of quarrels between the two men, growing out of Stevens' jealousy of his wife. Shortly after the couple went to live at the Wertz home, Mrs. Stevens said, the trouble began. Her husband, she said, was jealous of her brother and her father and that he frequently quarreled with her about them.

"My husband and I," she said, "went to visit at the home of John Walker at New Way, Friday. We stayed at the Walker home until Saturday at 10:30 o'clock, when we started for home. My sister Ruby was with us. On the way home our horse became frightened and ran away. We were thrown out of the buggy and it was some time before we got the horse and started for home."

"It was about 12:30 when we drove into the barn yard and George put the horse away. When we went into the house, mother was alone. She said Pa and 'Bud' had gone to town. About 2 o'clock, I was sitting on George's lap in the kitchen, when mother looked down the road and said, 'There comes Pa and 'Bud' now and I guess they have been drinking.' George went to the window and looked out and said, 'you're right they have been drinking.' He said he would go out and put up their horse. He told me to go into the front room and this was the last I saw him, till I heard a shot and ran into the yard."

"George was lying on the ground near the porch in the rear of the house, and I ran to him. As I lifted his head he said, 'Sweetheart, I am dying, run for a doctor.' My mother came out of the house and I started for a neighbors house to call a doctor. When I came back my husband was dead. When I ran to George's side, 'Bud' said, 'Helen, I've shot him' and then he turned around and started away to put the horse up."

Interesting and Successful Affair

the Hotel Warden.

The employees of the Ohio Light and Power company tendered a reception to the new general manager, Mr. Frank Ephy and Mrs. Ephy at the Warden Saturday evening.

The affair was a happy departure from the stereotyped form and for that reason was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone.

The large dining room had been made especially attractive by Manager Rowe. In the center of the long table around which the 70 guests were seated, was a beautiful American flag, which floated continuously in an "O. L. & P. Co." breeze while from one corner of the room the rays of a 500 watt searchlight played upon the fluttering stars and stripes. Red carnations at each place and table decorations of smilax and cut flowers gave a touch of color to the snowy table linen. Place cards that were really souvenirs were drawn and lettered by Mr. A. Shutt.

Some hobby or characteristic of each guest was portrayed by the artist who prepared the place cards. A glance at the menu gave one a very indefinite idea of what was to follow. Well, if you doubt it read for yourself.

It will be unnecessary to translate this into English further than to say that the turkey and all the "fixings" were unusually good.

When the "slow burning insulations" were lighted, Mr. E. T. Hollingsworth, as toastmaster, addressed those assembled and told Mr. and Mrs. Ephy of the pleasure the company's employees had in planning the reception in their honor. While no formal program of toasts had been arranged Mr. Hollingsworth called upon Mr. A. J. Darrah, superintendent of the Mr. Vernon plant, to extend a word of greeting and welcome to the new general manager.

Mr. Ephy acknowledged the compliment extended by Mr. Darrah and in his remarks expressed the hope that the present cordial relations between employee and management would always continue. "We are all employees of the Ohio Light and Power company," said Mr. Ephy. "I, as well as you and all of us are dependent upon one another for success. I want you to know and to feel that the door of the general manager's office is open to every employee at all times and that co-operation among us spells success."

As stated a moment ago, there was no formal program of addresses and no treacherous speeches. Instead there was a spirit of fun and good fellowship. The symposium very seriously called the guests' attention to an act of bravery on the part of a member of the committee on arrangement, Mr. E. S. Browne, said act consisting of a thrilling rescue at Buckeye Lake. The toastmaster said that Mr. Browne's associates could not let the incident pass unnoticed and in order that proper recognition might be given a beautiful medal was prepared. This was then presented to Mr. Browne, who though overcome with emotion, succeeded in expressing his deep appreciation of the honor.

But there were others. Mr. Browne wasn't the only pebble on the beach by any means. Whis, Mr. Hollingsworth had a whole box full of medals to say nothing of an iron cross or two and several pen and ink drawings which he bestowed upon Buell, Mr. Morrison, Mr. MacCracken, Mr. Wilkinson, Mr. Mott, Mr. Farbeau, Mr. Marshall, Miss McCarthy and others.

A humorous presentation speech was made by Mr. Hollingsworth, who showed that he was in possession of a fund of good humor and good English but he knew what he was talking about.

Around the banquet table were seated men and women from every department of the service—linemen, meter readers, bookkeepers, solicitors, superintendents, coal shovellers, draughtsmen, messenger boys, stenographers—they were all there except those who had to remain on the job to watch the wheels go round and provide power and light for the company's several plants throughout the state. It was a jolly party and a big success.

Mr. Ephy came to Newark from Tiffin where he had been manager of the Northern Division of The Ohio Light and Power company operating at Tiffin, Fremont and Fostoria, since the organization of the company. He succeeds Mr. Montgomery, who has been transferred to Atlantic City. Mr. Ephy, now in charge of both the Northern and Southern divisions, has spent his "vacation in the operation of electric properties."

The Ohio Light and Power company now operates in the following cities: Newark, Lancaster, Logan, New Lexington, Shawnee, New Straitsville, Crooksville, Fredericksburg, Mt. Vernon, Tiffin, Fremont, Fostoria, and Bascom.

Within the past two years transmission lines have been built connecting Newark with Lancaster, Logan, New Lexington, Shawnee, New Straitsville and Crooksville.

Construction work will be started within the next thirty days on building a second circuit from the Newark plant in order to give a double source of supply to the above cities, which will not only assure them an ample but a continuous supply of current.

The manufacturing facilities to be had in these cities due to unlimited power offered by the transmission system has enabled them to add greatly to their number, industries which would not otherwise have been attracted to their communities.

During the present year additions will be made to the Newark plant which will include an extension to the present building, and the installation of another large turbine driven generator in addition to the two already in operation. This will involve the expenditure of a large amount of money, but will nearly double the present capacity of the plant and will be another step toward the completion of the plant in the mammoth proportions originally contemplated by the company.

The company is pursuing an active and energetic policy in the installation of electric lighting and power systems in several of the southern towns that are not at present so supplied, thus adding greatly to the comfort and prosperity of these communities.

In addition to this the company is extending its power lines from the main transmission lines to the different factories, mines, and mills within the entire district, thus relieving these industries of the difficulties encountered in the generation of their own power. The demand from these concerns has been so great that it has been almost impossible to meet it at times.

"DRESS UP"
IN NEWARK
MCH. 28-APR. 8

NEWARK DRESS UP WEEK.

Whereas, the Retail Merchants of Newark recognize in the Spring Dress Up campaign an influence calculated to contribute to the public good by inspiring and developing personal and civic pride through the emphasis it places on the importance of a neat and well dressed appearance,

Be it

Resolved: That the aforesaid Retail Merchants of Newark do hereby declare that period between the dates March 28 and April 8, 1916, to be observed as the Spring Dress Up in Newark, in co-operation with similar campaigns throughout the United States, promoted by the Dress Up Bureau, Inc.

And be it further

Resolved: That the aforesaid Retail Merchants of Newark do hereby ask for the earnest co-operation of every man and woman citizen of Newark to make this Spring Dress Up a time of unusual interest and benefit to all the people of our city.

The fact that Newark merchants will join in the nation wide "Spring Dress Up" movement March 28-April 8 has already been announced in this newspaper.

The merchants plan to observe Spring Dress Up on an extensive scale. All merchants of the city will be asked to co-operate in the observance of the week.

It is explained that Dress Up week will not resemble Style Show week as there will be no attraction outside of the store rooms. There will be no parades or any thing of that nature but the stores will be appropriately decorated and placed in their best order. The project is nation wide and a large majority of the cities of the United States will observe the dates.

SELF DEFENSE

His son said he was in the front of the yard at the time the shot was fired and did not know Stevens had been shot until he ran around the house. Mrs. Wertz, who was in the kitchen when the shooting occurred, said she did not see the shooting, but saw "Bud" run into the house and get his shot gun.

"George started out of the kitchen to take care of the horse for my husband," she said, "and before he went out he ran to the cupboard and took something out. I heard him quarreling with my son, but did not look out the window. A few minutes later 'Bud' ran into the house and got his shot gun. Then I heard a shot and running out on the back porch, saw George lying on the ground."

"I went to his side, and 'Bud' said, 'come on away, he's done for.' I said I was going to stay with Helen. 'Bud' then walked away. I did not see George take a knife out of the cupboard, but when I went outside, I saw that 'Bud's' left arm was cut and there was my bread knife lying on the ground."

Mrs. Stevens said that her brother and husband had quarreled Wednesday because her husband was choking her. She said the latter was jealous of her father and her brother and had warned her to stay away from them.

A few minutes after the shooting, Sheriff W. L. Jackson was notified by phone to go to the Wertz home, that a man had been shot, but the informant did not say whether it was a murder or suicide. Sheriff Jackson, County Prosecutor Horner and an Advocate representative, left a little later in Bazzler's ambulance for the scene of the shooting.

When the coroner arrived at the Wertz home, he immediately examined the body, which was lying where it had fallen under a little tree about five feet from the rear porch. Then with the prosecutor he questioned the Wertz family.

Their investigation disclosed the fact that Wertz and his son had been in Newark in the morning to consult an attorney relative to filing a divorce petition for Mrs. Stevens. "We wanted Helen separated from this man, Stevens," Jack Wertz told Horner and Jackson.

"I don't know what the quarrel started over," he said, "but I don't think Stevens knew about our trying to get a divorce."

Stevens' body was brought to Newark and taken to the Bazzler undertaking parlors in West Church street and prepared for burial. Late Saturday night Coroner W. L. Jackson, assisted by Drs. H. J. Davis and Carl J. Evans, performed an autopsy.

The autopsy showed that 159 buckshot had penetrated the body.

GET IT FIRST—NOT LAST

When a cold grips your system it is convincing proof that your condition is weakened—remember that. It is risky indeed to simply trust your strength to throw it off, because neglected colds have brought more serious sickness than any other one thing, while weakening cathartics and stimulating syrups are often depressing and dangerous.

The one best treatment for any cold—the one so often relied on when others fail, is the powerful blood-nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, which feeds the very sources of bodily strength to suppress the present cold and generate strength to thwart further sickness.

Get Scott's first, not last—and insist on the genuine—always free from alcohol and injurious drugs.

the greater number in the region of the left side, between the hips and the shoulders. The heart was penetrated by five shot, which, according to the coroner's theory, resulted in hemorrhages, causing death within a few minutes. The body was practically a sieve. Seven shot entered the left leg as far down as the knee and the right leg contained two shots, just above the knee.

The left eye was discolored and there was an abrasion on the forehead. This, according to Dr. Jackson, was probably due to a blow from some blunt instrument.

The coroner's inquest will probably be held the early part of this week, Dr. Jackson said today.

Jack Wertz, father of "Bud" came to the city Sunday morning and engaged Atty. Phil Smythe to defend his son, an affidavit having been sworn against him in Justice Fletcher S. Scott's court charging murder.

An Advocate representative interviewed young Wertz in jail Sunday afternoon but he refused to tell a connected story of the crime, referring his questioner to his attorney. However, he answered a great many questions relating to himself and his father-in-law.

"Bud" stated that he was nineteen years of age and had known Stevens a little over a year. Said he met him in jail for the first time a year ago last January. Stevens told him that his home was in Newark. After their release they went to the Wertz farm where Stevens was employed by his father.

"Stevens ran away with Helen and they were married in Columbus," said Wertz, "and that's where the trouble started. They frequently quarreled and Stevens abused her and I couldn't stand it."

"I shot him in self-defense but I do not care to talk of the matter and will have to refer you to Attorney Phil Smythe who is looking after my interests."

Wertz was told by the newspaper man that his side of the case might place him in a better light with the public but he evidently was acting under instructions.

He asked his questioner what paper he represented and said, "one of you fellows came down here last night and got my picture. I sure was scared when that thing went off," meaning the flash light.

"They had a picture of one of the Columbus papers and I'm today," he continued, "for one of the men read it to me."

The Wertz family consists of Jack Wertz and wife, Jack and "Bud" Wertz, a son, Mrs. Helen Stevens, daughter, and wife of the murdered man, and Ruby, a daughter, aged fourteen.

"Bud" Wertz has a bad police court record. He was arrested for causing a disturbance at the Cat Ran place. He was also arrested for intoxication and was taken for driving the family from home and for assaulting his father. He was later arrested for setting fire to a bed in the Wertz home. He was taken in to custody for assault and battery on Columbus State and was indicted for that, being given the maximum sentence by Judge Harry Jewell, six months in the county jail.

Young Wertz also had trouble with Sheriff Swank, that official finding that he was interfering with his domestic affairs. He warned him to keep away but Wertz did not heed the advice and Swank ran across him in the Arcade annex one night, blows raining and Wertz getting the worst of the affair. The trouble resulted in Sheriff Swank securing a divorce within a short time after.

KNIFE FOUND NEAR BODY BY SHERIFF SWANK

Sheriff Swank stated to the Advocate today that when he reached the Wertz home and went to the spot where the dead man was lying that he found a butcher knife near Stevens' right hand. It was the knife which Mrs. Wertz claims she saw him take from the cupboard.

When young Wertz was apprehended he had a cut across his right shoulder or rather his clothing as the knife did not enter the flesh. There was, however, a slight cut across the wrist which the young man claimed was done by Stevens in the tussle which followed after they left the house.

An examination of the body disclosed the fact that the shot centered all the way from the knee to the throat. Wertz declared that he was only a few feet away when he fired.

The Sheriff has had the gun tested by an expert, firing it at given distances. This information he expects to place before the grand jury.

The shot used were No. 6's, killed shot and not buckshot as was first reported. They are used principally for small game, birds, rabbits and squirrels.

FIRST DEGREE MURDER CHARGE
AGAINST WERTZ

An affidavit charging first degree murder against James Wertz was filed in Justice Fletcher S. Scott's court today. It was subscribed to by Sheriff Chas. H. Swank and accuses Wertz of causing the death of George Stevens from a gunshot wound. The young man was in the jail when the affidavit was served from Justice Scott's court.

IS SAME FARM
WHERE WOMAN WAS MURDERED

The scene of Saturday's tragedy in which George Stevens met his death at the hands of his brother-in-law, James "Bud" Wertz, was the same farm on which Mrs. Frances Wertz, "Bud's" grandmother, was so cruelly murdered early in the morning of June 1, 1905.

It will be remembered that Mrs. Wertz, who was 60 years of age, lived with a granddaughter on the Wertz farm and had a premonition that an attempt might be made on her life and constantly kept weapons in the house and in her bedroom.

On the night of June 1, she was awakened by some one in the kitchen and the aged lady grabbed a part of a pitchfork with the tines still attached and started to investigate.

She was killed just as she reached the kitchen door, her skull being crushed with a club.

A son-in-law, Levi Bevard, was afterwards arrested and charged with the crime but at the trial that followed he was acquitted and the murder remains unsolved.

MRS. SHACKLEFORD
LEAVES HER ESTATE
TO HER FOSTER SON

Samuel Shackelford today made application to have the will of his foster mother, Mrs. Jane Shackelford admitted to probate.

The will devises her property in Hoover street to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Shackelford, the former being an adopted son.

The next request asks that her remaining property be sold and put in trust for her half-brother, Elias Woodford, and that at his death the trust revert to Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Shackelford.

D. M. Guy is named to act as executor by Mrs. Shackelford.

The will will probably be admitted to probate tomorrow. The value of the estate cannot be definitely estimated but it is known that it will exceed $5,000.

Mrs. Shackelford, more than 90 years old, was murdered together with her half-brother, Elias Woodford on Thursday night, Feb. 17.

A grandson of the old woman, Stinson Shackelford, son of Samuel Shackelford, was suspected and he left Newark. A week later in Cincinnati he was killed in a pistol fight with officers sent to arrest him.

RAILROADS AGREE
ON SUBWAY MATTER; ARE READY TO SIGN

Officials of the B. & O. and Pennsylvania railroads have practically agreed on several matters which last week delayed the final signing of the contract for the construction of the subway. "The contract is as good as signed," said a city official this afternoon.

A representative of the real estate department of the B. & O. arrived in the city today and took a general survey of the ground. He will return next Monday and remain until all options on land needed for the improvement are secured.

Suffered for Years

There are many people who will be interested in the experience of Mrs. Julia Byard, Port Benton, Mont. She writes:

"I suffered for years with gall-stones. A friend wrote me about Pruitola and Traxo. I started taking it and am completely cured now and feel better than I have felt for twenty years."

Mrs. Byard's testimony is similar to that of many who have given this remedy a chance to help them. Pruitola is a powerful lubricant for the intestinal organs, softening the hardened particles that cause so much suffering and expelling the congested waste in an easy, natural way. A single dose is usually sufficient to clearly indicate its efficacy. Traxo is a splendid tonic-alterative that acts on the liver and kidneys, stimulates the flow of gastric juice to aid digestion, and removes bile from the general circulation.

Pruitola and Traxo are prepared in the "Pilot" Laboratories at Monticello, Ill., and arrangements have been made to supply them through representative druggists. In Newark they can be obtained at Evans' Drug Store, Warden Hotel block.

GET IT FIRST—NOT LAST

When a cold grips your system it is convincing proof that your condition is weakened—remember that. It is risky indeed to simply trust your strength to throw it off, because neglected colds have brought more serious sickness than any other one thing, while weakening cathartics and stimulating syrups are often depressing and dangerous.

The one best treatment for any cold—the one so often relied on when others fail, is the powerful blood-nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, which feeds the very sources of bodily strength to suppress the present cold and generate strength to thwart further sickness.

Get Scott's first, not last—and insist on the genuine—always free from alcohol and injurious drugs.

EVEN CROSS, SICK CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF FIGS

If feverish, bilious, constipated, give fruit laxative at once.

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomachache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, "Mother." A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

Symphony Orchestra at Auditorium. "Dr. Kunwald may not be unmatched among the conductors of the first rank in our immediate time. It is perilous to bear a measuring rule into the orchestral Olympus. But none of them seem to assemble more of the attributes of a great conductor to hold them in just balance.

"Dr. Kunwald's is that faculty of divination and that quality of impartment which differentiates the great conductor from the mere able practitioner of the art."—D. J. E. in Pittsburgh Dispatch.

"Dr. Kunwald has transformed a capable orchestra into a company of artists, inspired, rather than led, by their gifted conductor. Beyond praise was the reading of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. There was no futile reaching out for hidden meanings. Instead, there was the nobly conceived presentation of a masterpiece."—James H. Rogers, in Cleveland News, March 20, 1914.

The wide-spread success of the popular concert in Cincinnati, as well as of Dr. Kunwald's plan in presenting the men of the orchestra as soloists, has resulted in a number of out of town engagements for programs of similar character. An important concert of this kind was given in Dayton, January 11th, when the soloist was Josef Vito, harpist of the orchestra.

"Mutt and Jeff" in College. "Laugh and the world laughs with you, weep and you weep alone." The lines of this immortal poem were never better illustrated than in the new comedy, Mutt and Jeff in College, which is to be the next attraction in the Auditorium theatre, Wednesday, March 15 with the usual matinee. The new production which is the latest of the Mutt and Jeff series, and which is bound to become more popular and profitable than any of its predecessors, is sponsored as usual by Manager Gus Hill who was the first to see the wonderful possibilities of transferring the cartoons to the stage. The cast is composed of thirty clever people who have been engaged for their respective abilities as artists, singers, fun-makers and gloom destroyers. The comedy, which scintillates with genuine novelties, original situations, wholesome mirth, features that are out of the beaten path and an elaborate scenic and electrical adornment, is in two acts and three scenes. It contains exclusive musical numbers written especially for the piece which is described as being ebullient of incessant laughter, hilarity and action.

At Auditorium. A drama full of little human touches as well as an underlying current of strong action in the Fine Arts Theatre play, "Acquitted," starring Wilfred Lucas. It will be shown at the Auditorium theatre tonight and tomorrow.

Wilfred Lucas has an entirely different role than that he had as a rich worldling in the Lillian Gish play, "The Lily and the Rose." In "Acquitted" he has a more sympathetic part as a home-loving, hard-working bookkeeper in an insurance office in a small town.

After suffering arrest and being cleared of a charge of murder, Lucas finds that his troubles have just begun. He finds that he can't get back his old position nor obtain a new one, because of the notoriety he has gained. His loving wife (Mary Allen) and two charming children (Evelle Love and Carmen De Rue) suffer before Lucas' eyes without his being able to help them.

Finally in desperation he goes to a hotel and turns on the gas, so that his family may be saved from starvation through his life insurance policy arrives before he has quite passed away and joy is restored to the family, when he gets back into position in the insurance company.

Elmer Clifton as a young reporter figures in some interesting scenes, aiding in getting the release of Lucas after his arrest.

Hartman Theatre, Columbus. Recalling his delightful "Disraeli" theatre goes will welcome the announcement of the appearance of George Arliss in his new success "Paganini" at the Hartman Theatre Columbus, on Tuesday and Wednesday nights and Wednesday matinee March 21 and 22. "Paganini" is said to give the distinguished character actor opportunities even surpassing those of "Disraeli," and to afford delightful entertainment in which eccentricity, comedy, pathos and a delightful love story are included. Successes in "Kismet" and "Milestones," already registered by Edward Knoblauch paved the way for the author's "Paganini." Klaw and Erlanger and George Tyler have surrounded Mr. Arliss with a notable company. His leading woman this season is Margery Mause, the beautiful and talented daughter of Cyril Maude, of "Grumpy" fame. Mail orders for seats for this engagement are being received now at the Hartman.

Selwyn and Co's "Twin Beds," will be the attraction at the Hartman on Thursday, Friday, Saturday March 23, 24 and 25, with a matinee Saturday. This irresistible laugh provoker is a farce in three acts by Salisbury Field and Margaret Mayo, the latter being also the author of the international success "Baby Mine." It was first presented more than a year ago in New York, playing to capacity houses all that time.

The company which will be seen at the Hartman is the number one organization and is composed of some of the cleverest farceurs in the theatrical world.

Alhambra Wednesday and Thursday. Clara Kimball Young, the World Film star, considers the role of Sonia Sokoloff, which she portrays in "The Yellow Passport," to be seen at the Alhambra on Wednesday, the greatest part in her film career. As an ambitious and noble hearted Russian girl persecuted by the dread Secret Police of that dark region, Miss Young has a part that gives her full scope to display every phase of her remarkable dramatic gifts.

Dayton, March 13.—A 16-pound boy, the fourteenth child born to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Condie during their 16 years of married life, arrived during baby week. Both mother and child are doing nicely, according to Dr. S. A. Broughman, attending physician, who says the child is the largest of which he has record in 20 years of practice.

Eight of the 14 children born to the couple are living. The child born previous to the one which came into the world baby week weighed 13 pounds. Neither the father, who is 35, nor the mother, who is 32, is much above medium stature.

Ex-Governor of Massachusetts to Study Commercial and Social Conditions in Japan.

Carl Hermann, brother of George Hermann, the well known clothier of this city, sailed from San Francisco on the Matsunaka for the Orient on February 22, a distance of 7000 miles.

A note written aboard ship on February 29 stated that he expected to arrive at Honolulu that day, that he had a fine voyage up to that time and was looking forward to a most wonderful trip. He expected to sail from Honolulu for Japan and would also visit the Philippine islands and China.

CARL HERMANN WITH WALSH ON TRIP TO ORIENT

Ex-Governor of Massachusetts to Study Commercial and Social Conditions in Japan.

Carl Hermann, brother of George Hermann, the well known clothier of this city, sailed from San Francisco on the Matsunaka for the Orient on February 22, a distance of 7000 miles.

A note written aboard ship on February 29 stated that he expected to arrive at Honolulu that day, that he had a fine voyage up to that time and was looking forward to a most wonderful trip. He expected to sail from Honolulu for Japan and would also visit the Philippine islands and China.

Former Governor Walsh of Massachusetts is sailing on the same boat with Mr. Hermann, the two gentlemen having become warm friends during the Panama-Pacific International exposition held at San Francisco last year, where Mr. Walsh represented his native state. Mr. Hermann being the commissioner of ceremonies for the big exposition.

The San Francisco Examiner has the following to say of the trip which is being made by the ex-governor and the former Newark young man:

"When the Matsunaka steams out of this port tomorrow with her nose toward the Orient and the 7000 miles of Sea, she will be followed by Democratic prayers for bon voyage, for she will be freighted with the most of the planks of the Democratic party, included and potential in the person of the courtly and urbane, genial and able David I. Walsh, former Gov. of Massachusetts.

Walsh has been mentioned as one of the big Democrats of the hour. It is stated that he is being seriously considered as a possible successor to Secretary Garrison. He has been named as a possible candidate to the United States Senate from Massachusetts and, last but not least, as a Vice-Presidential candidate next fall.

Former Governor Walsh represented the State of Massachusetts at the exposition last year, and is therefore being greeted by San Franciscans with the cordiality accorded to an old friend. Gov. Walsh will be accompanied on his Oriental trip by Carl S. Hermann who was commissioner of ceremonies at the exposition.

Governor Walsh was the guest yesterday of B. G. Holt, a local shipping man, at a luncheon held in the Commercial Club quarters. Among the local business men invited to meet the former Governor were Captain Robert Bellar, Clarence E. Baen and Philip S. Teller, Carl S. Hermann and Theodore Hardee, former exposition officers, were also present.

The American Merchant marine was referred to at some length by Governor Walsh in his remarks at the luncheon. "While I have been here," he said, "I have been given some very valuable and helpful information on this subject by the business men of this city. I have come to the conclusion that the great masses of the people on the other side of the continent do not properly appreciate your problem. I am of the opinion that you need to educate your country to your needs here."

Governor Walsh and Mr. Hermann will visit the Hawaiian Islands. Thence they will sail for Japan, China and the Philippines. They will study the commercial, social, industrial and political conditions and seek thoroughly to familiarize themselves, particularly with the Philippine question, and conditions there existent. They will be absent on their tour for about two months, after which they will return to this country.

SUGGESTIONS TO SICK WOMEN

How Many Are Restored To Health.

First.—Almost every operation in our hospitals performed upon women becomes necessary through neglect of such symptoms as backache, irregular and painful periods, displacements, pain in the side, burning sensation in the stomach, bearing down pains, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness.

Second.—The medicine most successful in relieving female ills is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It regulates and strengthens the organism; it overcomes disease.

For forty years it has been making women strong and well, relieving backache, nervousness, ulceration and inflammation, weakness, displacements, irregularity and periodic pains. It has also proved invaluable in preparing for childbirth and the Change of Life.

Third.—The great number of unsolicited testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., many of which are from time to time published by permission, are proof of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, in the treatment of female ills.

Fourth.—Every sailing woman in the United States is cordially invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free, will bring you health and may save your life.

Always consult an architect

—he is a "clearing house" of building experiences

Just as you respect the vast amount of work and care it has taken for you to succeed in your business, so you should respect the architect in his business. As an originator and a "clearing house" of building ideas and experiences—gained from putting up many buildings, also from studying the trend of building laws and future needs of housekeeping, he arranges the building so that it shall later suit other folks in case you sell or rent.

Why architecture depends upon comfort

You may build in the joyous Spring-time or Summer, and think only of porches and screens, but the architect always keeps before him a vision of the grim Winter Kings. He knows that when the bitter cold days come, any occupied building will be a failure that is not cleanly, healthfully, genially warmed by coal-economizing radiator heating. These outfits change houses into homes, change barn-like stores into pleasant shops!

Wherein architects save heating costs

The architect will more than earn his fee by alone making the radiator heating outfit cost you nothing, through omitting from the plans the extra chimneys, needless mantels, useless inner doors, double window sash, weather strips, storm doors, etc.

Architects study future values for you

Proofs of lowest-priced heating

The testimony of a million owners at home and abroad prove the fuel economy. There is absence of repairs—no wearing out—the screwed-tight joints prevent ash-dust and soot damages to furnishings and decorations. These outfits are simplest to run and property earns lowest insurance rate. IDEAL Boilers and AMERICAN Radiators are the best that money can buy, pay for themselves! Fully guaranteed.

Architects know how this heating pays!

The IDEAL Heating outfit is the only equipment put into a building that will never be worth less than you pay for it, and will repeatedly repay by 100 years of service its original cost, through fuel and labor savings and absence of repairs. Can you possibly invest money better or more safely than this?

ESTABLISHED IN 1829
Entered as Second Class Matter March 10, 1852, at the postoffice at Newark, Ohio, under Act of March 3, 1879.

One way of putting the third movement is to have down and buy an automobile on account of the chance that the price may go higher before the season is over.

The fact that one belongs to the working people and is thereby entitled to some special indulgence during Lent, does not prove that he belongs to that class when he is trying to get into society.

Kentucky Republicans are sending two colored delegates to the General convention. Ohio Republicans are throwing forty votes to the cause. Ralph Tyler, of Ohio, had the temerity to even dare to be a candidate. Yet Willis thinks he is a colored vote clincher because he made a policeman of a colored voter.

The state highway department withheld $750 from the final estimate of John C. Capper, contractor in Lawrence county, for "road work expenses" after the latter had expended for completion of work because of weather conditions. In an appeal to the county commissioners Capper showed that the estimate had made but one visit and received the full amount.

The Cincinnati Republican organization, which according to State Superintendent James A. Whitely, of the Anti-Saloon League, is "worse than a rain barrel" and which is against Judge D. D. Woodman, of that city, for United States senator simply because he is perceived as a teetotaler, has voted to endorse Governor Willis for delegate to the national convention. It has taken down the dry candidate, John Glass, and also the colored candidate, Ralph N. Tyler, in order to get more votes for the straggling young governor or who races with the piggy rabbit and runs with the prohibition hounds.

Ashbrook Pension Bill.
The National Tribune, a second paper at Washington which has a large following among the old soldiers of the country, prints representative Ashbrook's "widows' pension bill" in full and upon its second page carries a large portrait of Mr. Ashbrook, together with the following tribute:
Hon. William A. Ashbrook, who represents the 17th district of Ohio, has been noted during all of his years of service in congress as an active, zealous friend of the veteran, and has now crowned this by the formulation of the bill for the increase of widows' pensions, which the committee on invalid pensions has adopted and reported to the house. It will probably pass the house substantially as written by him, and

The Mexican Raid.
(Philadelphia Record.)
It is difficult to see how armed intervention in Mexico can be longer avoided not intervention in the political affairs of that country, but intervention for self-protection. The affair at Columbus, N. M., was undoubtedly an act of war. The Mexicans who raided this town, which is situated, four miles this side of the frontier, killing a number of American civilians, including one woman, did not represent the recognized Government; but provisional President Carranza cannot escape responsibility for the invasion. If he has not the power to prevent such occurrences—and he evidently has not—it is the right, and it is the duty, of this Government to protect its citizens in their own homes by any means that may be necessary.
If there is no other preventive than the occupation of Chihuahua, Sonora and possibly other northern States of the Mexican Republic, then Carranza as may become sources of danger will have to be occupied. And the occupation will have to continue until the banditti who infest these states have been captured, or otherwise made harmless, and a condition of security established there. The United States cannot submit to invasions and other violations of its territory, and the Government at Washington cannot accept assurances from Mexico that do not assure. This Government has given repeated evidence that it has no desire to control the political destinies of the Mexican people; it has been influenced by the single opportunity to have expression to their wishes in the matter and establish a government which the great majority will recognize. The Administration at Washington has gone to the extreme in forbearance; but there are limits even to the virtue of patience. Provisional President Carranza was recognized as the head of the legitimate Government of Mexico on his representation that he could and would afford all American and other foreign residents of that country security in respect to their lives and property and in the pursuit of their lawful business. He has not been able to perform his promise. The massacre at Columbus, which remains unredressed, though a few of the alleged perpetrators have been caught and summarily executed, the conditions in Chihuahua and Sonora have not been materially bettered, and there is no telling when a similar outrage may occur. Americans can be advised to remain out of the zone of danger until security shall have been established. But the affair at Columbus presents an entirely different question. Our territory has been violated and Americans have been murdered in their own homes. The invaders have looted American troops and killed and wounded a large number. This is war, and when war is made on the nation, the nation must defend itself.

Gasoline.
(Cleveland Leader.)
It may be possible for the government to give the consumers of gasoline some relief by holding the refining companies to strict account for anything in the nature of unusual combinations to control prices and reap great profits. In the nature of things, however, such help will be only temporary and partial unless the sources of the supply of crude oil from which gasoline is made can be enlarged in something like the proportion that the use of gasoline increases. What is needed for the immediate future, in addition to careful watching for violations of the laws against the restriction of trade, is the development of new and rich oil fields, if that is possible.
In the end, of course, the supply of crude petroleum will be so greatly reduced that some other motive power will have to be substituted for gasoline in engines which are now used with that fuel. It will be necessary to get along without the stores accumulated through uncounted millions of years and use instead some substance which can be renewed from year to year, like grain or root crops.

Portugal At War.
(New York World.)
The formal declaration of war by Germany against Portugal was not charge conditions in Europe majorly. Portugal's recent seizure of interned German ships was in itself an act of war and was probably the latest blow that it is capable of delivering.
Portugal and Great Britain have been allies since the Napoleonic wars, and by treaty the republic is bound to supply its neighbor with 10,000 troops whenever they may be needed. Early in the war the Portuguese Parliament authorized the Government to take part in the struggle at discretion. In the Portuguese provinces in Africa common sense has already been made with the British against Germany.
Without counting Canada, Australia and India, fourteen nations are now in conflict, viz: Great Britain, France, Russia, Italy, Japan, Belgium, Serbia, Montenegro, San Marino and Portugal on one side, and Germany, Austria-Hungary, Turkey and Bulgaria on the other, with a fair prospect that Roumania and Greece may presently be added to the number.

You who have no garden are missing one of the keenest and most legitimate of the pleasures of life. If you are a happy and an enthusiastic, you have, of course, made a careful study of the seed catalogues, whose name is legion, and have pictured in your mind's eye the glorious effect of a massed planting of this new flower in that little nook which has always looked a trifle bare; you have perhaps tasted in your mind as vividly as a physical taste of a moment ago, a delicious new cantaloup or sweeter sweet corn, buttery green limas or more delicately toothsome brussels sprouts, the very thought of which arouses an anticipatory keenness of palatal delight that opens wide the flood gates of the digestive fluids.—Good Health.
Virtue Its Own Reward.
Rev. Stephen Merritt tells this of the self-denial practiced by his little grandson, Conrad. Conrad's father, as was usual with him at the approach of Lent, asked the members of his family one evening to say what special sacrifices they would make during that season. Conrad asked if he must decide at once. "No," he was told, "you may think it over, but we should know your decision by tomorrow. And remember, it must be something that you like very much." The next morning Conrad announced that he had finally decided to give up going to Sunday school.—The Christian Herald.

BABY SCORING IN THE CONTEST HELD LAST WEEK
Editor of the Advocate:
Because of lack of understanding regarding the recent baby scoring contest it seems advisable that a word of explanation be given. Unfortunately it was not a beauty contest, but purely a physical examination. The winners in the contest were not more beautiful, or angelic in temper, nor probably in better physical health, than a great many of those who lost; therefore in order that the mothers may understand I beg to make the following explanation of the standard used in the test:
If the child's head was slightly out of symmetrical proportions a loss of five points was sustained; if the fontanel was abnormally large for the age, five points were lost. If the child was allowed to lie too long on its back while young, resulting in a flattening of the occipital region, five points were lost. If the eyes were too wide, or too close together, it meant the loss of five or more points. If the ears were too large, or too small, or flared away from the head, a loss was sustained. If the bridge of the nose was abnormally depressed, five points were lost. If there were enlarged glands in the neck, it meant a loss of ten points. If there were curvature of the spine, caused by the child being held over the arm too long at a time, or if the child was allowed, while young, to sit up and bend over playing with its toes, causing a posterior curvature of the lower dorsal region, as much as twenty points were lost. If teething were delayed, or the teeth were notched and in ridges, or discolored, five or ten points were lost. Even a coated tongue, or an enlarged tongue, meant the loss of five points.
We trust Mr. Editor, that this will enable the mothers of Newark to understand and realize that because their baby may have failed to score the highest in number of points it does not at all signify that they are deficient in either health or development. On the other hand it might be wise for each member to find out where her baby was deficient in the scoring and call upon the family physician for advice in correcting the defect.
It is quite probable that in the majority of cases the child will rapidly outgrow every defect; but in some cases, as, for instance, in the spinal curvature, some corrective measures could be suggested by the family doctor that would remove a serious handicap to the child's future health and usefulness.
There has been some little inquiry from the mothers who could not be present on the appointed days, whether it would be possible to have this scoring done at any other time? We would suggest that the baby be taken to the family physician for a thorough examination.
In behalf of those who served in the scoring test on the west side of the city, we wish to hereby extend our appreciation of the patience and consideration of the mothers in their efforts to prevent their children from disturbing those within their hearing.
In conclusion Mr. Editor, we trust that "Baby Week" in the city of Newark has resulted in some good in enabling mothers in caring for their offspring, which the Scriptures say are "an heritage of the Lord."

Society

The Loyal Sons and Daughters of the Rocky Fork Sunday school gave a surprise to their teacher, Mrs. William Stricker, Friday evening, it being her 38th birthday anniversary. The evening was spent in social games.

The following were entertained: Misses Margaret Miller, Hazel Davis, Stella Smith, Zella Rector, Ethel Davis, Nellie Devoll, Vera Miller, Delia Devoll, Blanche Claggett, Inez Ridenbaugh and Lillian Boyer; Messrs. Floyd Rector, Lee Barcus, Cary Coon, Jesse Smith, Dennis Coon, Wayne Nethers, Rufus Smith, Guy Porter, Paul Miller, Willie Hunter, Coman Miller, Brice Casteel, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Boyer, and little son Blimey. Mr. William Stricker and Mr. O. F. Miller.

A very interesting meeting of the Review club was held on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Frank D. Hall in North Fifth street. The afternoon program was devoted to the opera "Il Trovatore," and Mrs. Wilson Hawkins, as an introduction to the story of the opera read the poem "Il Trovatore" by Owen Meredith and accompanied by Verdi was played by Miss Helen Bower.

Mrs. Hall read the story of the play and illustrated it with many beautiful records of the opera.

Miss Madge Lindsay was hostess to the members of the Research club on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Alta McEwen in Wyoming street, and the following program was given:

Roll call, Famous Women — Miss Helen Bower.

Influential American Women — Mrs. M. L. Wilson.

Women in the Present War — Mrs. Theodore Taylor.

Reading — Miss Grace Gorbey.

The guests of the club were Miss Edith Thomas and Mrs. Dickerson.

Mrs. Frank Hall will entertain at her home in North Fifth street on Thursday afternoon with a thimble party.

Mrs. Carl Ritchey, very pleasantly entertained at dinner Thursday. The day was spent in needle work. Those present were Mrs. Barton Tavenner, Mrs. James Taylor and Mrs. Barton Ewers.

The members of the "B. W." Embroidery club were pleasantly entertained at the home of Mrs. Olive Hartshorn in Bowers avenue Thursday afternoon. The time was spent in needlework and crochet. One new member was taken in, Mrs. S. Beabout. A delicious luncheon was served by the members. Mrs. H. L. Swartz, Mrs. M. Reckty, Mrs. E. Rorer, Mrs. F. Swartz, Mrs. Ed. Smith, Mrs. E. Swartz, Mrs. J. Borromey, Mrs. C. Martin, Mrs. Joe Church, Mrs. R. Conley, Mrs. W. Neffling, Mrs. E. Howard and the hostess, Mrs. O. Hartshorn. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. E. Howard in South Pine street, March 23.

The Miscellaneous Needle Workers will meet at the home of Mrs. Elmer Wiles in Tucuman street Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. It is hoped that all members will be present to answer to roll call.

The Willing Workers Sunday school class will meet with Mrs. Coulter, No. 70 North Fourth street, Tuesday evening, March 14th.

Lees-Hogeman. At the home of the officiating minister, Rev. R. D. Barr, 95 South Fourth street, Mr. Charles O. Lees and Miss Mayne Hogeman were married Sunday. They were accompanied by a number of friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Lees will be at home to their many friends after March 15th.

Silent Circle Meeting. The Silent Circle of The King's Daughters will meet Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Ross Smith, 157 North Fifth street.

Funeral of Aunt. Miss Ethel Boner of 142 South Second street has returned from Lancaster where she was called to attend the funeral of her aunt, Mrs. Maggie King. Mrs. King, who formerly resided in Stanbery street, this city, died after but a short illness and the funeral took place on Thursday.

At Hub Clothing Store. Foster Wyant, who has been working in Springfield for the past year, has accepted a position as clerk in the Hub clothing store.

Change in Lyric. An error occurred in stating that Mr. Sam Gallagher had sold half interest in the Lyric theatre. It should have read Mr. John Gallagher. This interest was purchased by Mr. Harry Eldon and that gentleman took possession today. A number of innovations will be made, including the installation of one vaudeville act a day and which will be changed three times per week.

Endeavor Meeting. The Endeavors of the Central Church of Christ will hold their regular monthly business meeting and social at the church Tuesday evening.

March 14 at 7:45. All young people of the church are invited.

Monthly C. E. Meeting. The Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church will hold their monthly business meeting and social this evening at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Hazlett in Hudson avenue.

Injuries Arm in Fall. Miss Anna Sunkel of 48 Wilson street, was injured in a fall last Wednesday but is now getting along nicely. It will be sometime before she can use her right arm.

What's-so-ever Meeting. The King's Daughters will meet at the home of Mrs. T. Brown, 133 West Main street, Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Look years younger! Use Grandmother's recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur and nobody will know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Granville

[Special to The Advocate] Granville, March 13.—Phi Gamma Delta extended royal hospitality to its alumni on Saturday evening in the form of the annual banquet, known in the vernacular as the "big dinner." No mere outsider can recount the many excellencies of the banquet, the subjects of the toasts which stimulated and cemented good fellowship. That a good time was enjoyed is proved by glance at the guest list which is given: Mr. R. M. Warner, Valparaiso, Ind.; Messrs. C. W. Montgomery, Roderick Jones, J. Howard Jones, G. D. Upson, Max Norpell, W. R. Montgomery, Kenneth Jones, Howard Upson, D. F. Stevens, district superintendent of the B. & O. of all Newark; L. M. Rankin, Ray Brook, Dr. Forster of Dayton, B. B. Ashbrook of Johnston, J. P. Rettig of Carleton, E. H. Davies, Napp, Rankin of Cleveland; J. H. Parkersburg, W. V.; R. W. Cochran of Trinway; C. T. Atwell of Zanesville; W. D. Fulton of Columbus; C. H. Kessler of Toledo; President C. W. Chamberlain; J. C. Swartz; T. S. Johnson, K. H. Eschman, Dr. Frank Carney all of Granville. Initiation of the new members took place at 5 o'clock at which time Horace Herries Feight of Dayton; Roderick and George Hayden of Newark; Ernest Erickson of Norfolk, and David Butler of Toledo were ushered in with fitting ceremonies. Hosts and guests attended the basketball game in Cleveland Hall, Denison vs. Mt. Vernon, and after witnessing a brilliant victory for Denison sat down to the beautifully spread board in the Lodge dining room at 9 o'clock. Following the feast, speeches were called for from G. D. Upson, D. F. Stevens, Dr. Frank Carney, and from Herbert Shorney of the active chapter.

Sunday was a great day in the Methodist church, as there was baptism and reception of new members. The special meetings which have been held in the church during the past month have been abundantly blessed, and many have come into the church during that time. Mr. W. A. Miles led the singing in his usual effective manner and the choir, composed of both children and grown people, was in good form.

There are few towns of its size anywhere that can produce church music of so uniformly superior quality as can be heard in Granville on any Sunday, in any one of its churches. There is no emulation, no sense of rivalry in this important part of the church service. Each congregation has a good chorister and organist, and many more good singers than can be accommodated in the choir, while soloists are to be heard at almost every service. Yesterday at the morning service in the Baptist church, Miss Grace Brooks, head of the vocal department in Denison Conservatory, and Mr. D. S. Whittlesey of Chicago, a member of the Denison faculty for the year, gave a notable rendition of Dudley Buck's "The Lord is My Light," and for the evening's offering, Gettysburg's "Savior, Comfort Me" was sung in a wonderfully effective manner by a quartette composed of Mr. Collier, Mr. Kenneth Ullman, Mr. Athey and Mr. Kier, of the Denison Glee club.

The Presbyterian ladies are preparing for one of their famous "serv-self" suppers to be given in the social rooms of the church on Friday evening, March 17th, beginning at 5:30 o'clock. The busy housewife can take a vacation for that evening.

Miss Emily Colwell spent the week-end at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. R. S. Colwell in South Prospect street. She was accompanied by Miss Mary Louise Arnold of Columbus. They were guests at the reception given by the ladies of Shepardson college in Stone Hall on Saturday afternoon; took in the basketball game in Cleveland Hall and afterward were entertained with a spread by Miss Bradstreet in Burton Hall on Saturday evening.

On Sunday afternoon they were guests at the Kappa Phi house. The ladies of Shepardson college gave one of the most enjoyable social functions of the year on Saturday.

For That Cough, All Run Down, In the Spring.

Spring is the time of year when we should put our house in order. We're run down after a hard winter—after grip, colds, catarrh. It's time to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, purely vegetable and free from alcohol or narcotics. It will search out impure and poisonous matter and drive it from the system. Buy it now in tablets or liquid.

ASK YOUR NEIGHBOR? Thousands in Ohio Benefited.

Newark, Ohio.—"I had a cough and it was hard to get rid of it. I tried different things and finally got Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This helped the cough and I found it a fine tonic. I am glad I used it and would use it again if I needed such a medicine."—MRS. ANNA FRALEY, 27 West Halliday Street, Newark, Ohio.

Cambridge, Ohio.—"Doctor Pierce's remedies have been tested in our family and we have found them very good. I used the 'Golden Medical Discovery' when I had a bad cough and was run down. I used two bottles for my cough and lung trouble. It did a great deal of good and I have been glad I used it."

"My daughter used 'Favorite Prescription' for a woman's tonic and she was satisfied with the results, when in a delicate way. Both medicines have done well for us."—MRS. MYRTA STEELE, Carlyle Ave., Cambridge, Ohio.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original little liver pills, first put up nearly 50 years ago. They regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels.

GEN. HOUGH PICKS CAMP GROUND; IS READY FOR CALL

[ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM] Columbus, March 13.—Adjutant-General Hough today took the precautions of selecting an extensive camping ground on the outskirts of Columbus to be used as a mobilization center in case the Ohio national guard should be called out for Mexican border service. After scouting about the suburbs for several hours, he indicated that one or two sites must be used. One of these was near Upper Arlington, northwest of Columbus, and the other near Camp Chase, which was used as assembly grounds by soldiers in the civil and Spanish wars. Both sites contain about 1500 acres.

"I have no information to indicate that the guard may be called out," said Adjutant-General Hough, "but I am doing this merely as a precautionary measure."

General Hough planned to go to Washington late today to confer with the war department concerning next summer's encampment.

LUMBER MEN PROTEST RATES; HEARING TODAY

[ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM] Memphis, Tenn., March 13.—Hearings were begun here today before an examiner on the complaints filed by the Southern Hardwood Traffic Bureau and other lumber interests in protest against proposed advances in freight rates from southern producing territory to points north of the Ohio river, which it is claimed, will increase the cost of transportation more than $5,000,000 annually.

The proposed rate increase are principally from Memphis and points in Mississippi and Arkansas and the Pine producing section east of the Mississippi river to the central freight association and western trunk line territory.

Newark will celebrate the spring Dress Up March 27 to April 8.

Wise Toledo Mother Treats Her Children's Colds "Externally"

Mrs. Bertha Cook Finds the "Outside" Application, Vap-O-Rub, Better than Internal Dosing.

Intelligent mothers everywhere realize that children should be dosed as sparingly as possible. Still croup and cold troubles must not be neglected.

Mrs. Bertha Cook, 366 Lee St., Toledo, Ohio, has solved this problem by use of the external treatment Vap-O-Rub.

Last winter when this treatment was being introduced in Toledo for the first time, Druggist C. E. Spayd presented Mrs. Cook with a complimentary jar, requesting that she give it a thorough trial and report the results.

Mrs. Cook writes:—"I consider Vap-O-Rub the best medicine I have ever found for winter use, especially for children. It will not blister or burn, so the children don't dislike it and it is better than internal medicine in many ways."

When I first tried Vap-O-Rub my little girl had had an awful cold and cough for some time. I used part of a jar on her and it gave great relief. During the winter I used two more large jars on my three children, and also on the grown folks of our family and found it fine for colds in the throat, head and lungs. In cases of hoarseness or croup I would just rub a little Vap-O-Rub over throat and chest, and cover with a warm flannel cloth, and also give them a little piece, the size of a bean, rolled in sugar. When my baby, two and a half years old, had pneumonia I used Vap-O-Rub liberally and found it a great help. I used it as directed and also dissolved some in hot water and bottled in a tea-kettle over her bed under a sheet. The vapors relieved the tightness in lungs and throat and proved a great help, and the attending physician advised my using it all winter with her. My three children all had whooping cough this summer, and I used it for this, applying it externally, and also using it in the tea-kettle, and found it loosened the cough and enabled them to raise the phlegm."

Vick's Vap-O-Rub comes in salve form and when applied over the throat and chest the body heat releases the ingredients in the form of vapors. In addition, it is absorbed through and stimulates the skin, aiding the vapors inhaled to relieve the congestion. It will be found superior to internal medicines for all forms of cold troubles, from head colds, asthma and catarrh, down to deep chest colds, sore throat, bronchitis, grippe, or incipient pneumonia. Three sizes, 25c, 50c or $1.00, at all druggists.

SYNOPSIS.

Mary Page, actress, is accused of the murder of James Pollock and is defended by her lover, Philip Langdon. Pollock was intoxicated. Shale, a crook and tool of Pollock, was on the fire escape watching for Langdon. At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Her maid testifies that Mary threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon.

"MY TIME WILL COME!"

KEEP your eye on this man Langdon! He was either in the room or at the door when James Pollock was murdered! The words of the witness were like a stone flung into a pool of subtle inference that sent ever-widening ripples of possibilities to lap the very shores of suspicion itself. Every eye was on Langdon now, but except for a tightening of the muscles about his jaw he gave no sign of perturbation or anger. The actor himself was uneasy now, however, and cast apologetic glances at both Mary and Langdon, moving nervously in the witness-stand as the prosecutor took up his questioning again.

"You say you overheard only a part of what was said before the police came. Will you tell us where you stood and why you heard only a part?"

"Yes, sir. The door opens out—as is always the case in hotel rooms—and when I started to open it I was behind it and therefore not visible from the room. But I could hear what was said when Mr. Langdon and Detective Farley came out from the inner room of the suite where they had gone to look for Miss Page."

"And when the police came, did you remain in the room or did you join in the search for Miss Page?"

"I joined in the search, and went with the police down the fire-escape and through the back street."

"What had become of Miss Page?"

"I don't know."

"Do you mean that the police did not find where she had gone?"

"Yes."

"What did you do?"

"I returned to the hotel, got my hat and coat and went home."

"That is all," said the prosecutor. But the judge leaned forward and voiced the question that everybody in the courtroom was mutely asking.

"Do you mean to say that a young lady in an evening gown and with no cloak walked through that street back of the hotel and that no one saw her? That you and the police got no clue in your search?"

"Yes, your Honor. Mary Page had disappeared absolutely, and no one knows where she went."

Langdon smiled, and the judge sat back with a little exclamation that was not complimentary to the police; but when the name of the next witness rang through the room he leaned forward again and spoke with some irritation to the prosecutor.

"Is it your intention, sir, to develop through the testimony of THIS witness the whereabouts of Miss Page after the murder? It seems to me that that is the testimony that should be brought forward now."

"Your Honor, the movements of Miss Page between the time she was left unconscious in the room at the Republic until the following morning will have to be told by Miss Page herself. They are not known to me and I have no witnesses to testify to her whereabouts or actions. I have, in fact, been unable to get anyone who actually saw the prisoner during her flight. The truth must come out, of course, and I have in the meantime called the sister of James Pollock to develop an important line in the case for the State."

Again Langdon smiled, and the judge sat back with a little shrug, as, amid a murmurous wave of comment and curiosity the name of the new witness was repeated:

"Ruth Pollock!"

The sister of the dead man who throughout the earlier testimony had sat unnoticed among the throng, was a tragic figure in her trailing black garments as she went to the stand.

"Miss Pollock, you have known the prisoner, Mary Page, for some years, have you not?"

"Yes, we were at school together and remained intimate friends afterwards."

"Was your brother also a friend of hers?"

"He was."

"Was there ever any closer relationship than that of mere friendship between your brother and Mary Page?"

"Yes. They were engaged to be married."

Even the judge sat forward in his chair at the words, so simply uttered and yet so sharply changing the aspect of things. The prosecutor's next question came quickly.

"Was your brother happy in his engagement?" he said.

"I don't know how to answer that question. He was happy because he wanted to marry Mary, but he knew she didn't love him."

"If Miss Page did not love your brother, why was she willing to be his wife?"

The girl flushed and answered less readily:

"Well, you see—there were reasons—and she had promised."

"Will you please tell us those reasons?"

A little gasping sob writhed from a woman's overburdened heart broke the stillness at that question, and Mrs. Page suddenly dropped forward, hiding her face in her hands. She knew only too well what was coming, and the courage that had kept her erect and smiling during the torture of the trial, gave way suddenly at this tearing open of old wounds. All her agony found vent in that one piercing cry of grief.

With her own eyes tear-dimmed Mary stretched out her hands yearningly, half whispering, "Mother! Mother!" and Langdon was at her side in a moment. She waved him back and, drawing her veil across her distorted face,

"How did you 'save him,' as you call it?"

"James told the detective that he had forgotten about giving the check to Mr. Page and that it was perfectly good."

"And Miss Page was naturally grateful to your brother for his having saved her father?" prompted the District Attorney, as Ruth broke off, not knowing how to go on.

"Grateful? Yes. She—she promised to marry him. I heard her tell Mr. Langdon."

"Was Mr. Langdon at the house at that time?"

"No, he came while I was sitting talking to Mrs. Page. Mary and James were in the next room, so I went to let Mr. Langdon in. He stopped at the gate, looking at my brother's automobile, and I walked down the path to meet him. While we were coming back toward the porch the others came to the door. Suddenly James caught Mary up in his arms and kissed her. She seemed to struggle against him and, slipping away, ran into the house. Mr. Langdon, thinking that my brother had kissed Mary against her will, rushed at him and threatened to strike him."

"Your Honor!" It was Langdon's voice, suddenly harsh and strained, "I protest against this evidence as entirely irrelevant and leading up to nothing that has a bearing upon the case at present."

"The court cannot sustain your objection," said the judge, curtly. "It is very unfortunate for you, Mr. Langdon, but whatever brings out the details of the relationship between Mary Page and James Pollock is decidedly relevant."

The District Attorney smiled in triumph. He turned to Ruth, who looked startled at the interruption, and said, gently:

"You were saying, Miss Pollock, that Mr. Langdon threatened your brother. Was there a fight?"

"No. Mary ran between them and said that James had a right to kiss her, that—that they were engaged."

"What did Mr. Langdon say then?"

"He didn't say anything. He just turned around and walked away, and Mary began to cry."

"Was the engagement of your brother and Miss Page made public?"

"Yes. At a dance."

"Did your brother and his fiancée seem happy on that occasion?"

"No. I—in fact, I know they were not."

"Did they tell you so?"

"No, but I overheard. I—was hiding in the conservatory."

With a smothered gasp of surprise Mary's head came up suddenly and for the first time the eyes of the two girls met; but now it was Mary's that were accusatory and Ruth's that were troubled and it was in answer to that reproach, rather than the startled look on the prosecutor's face, that made Ruth add shyly: "It was all just in fun! I had promised a dance to Mr. Brandon, but I had told him that if he could find me before the music was half over, I would give him two more. For I had discovered a nook behind the palms which I was sure no one else could find."

She stammered over the girlish confession, a tide of crimson dyeing her pale cheeks.

"While I was hidden there, Mary and Mr. Langdon, who had been dancing together, came into the conservatory. I—I didn't move because I felt I should look so silly, hiding like a kid behind the palms, and I thought they would soon go away. But—they didn't."

"Did Miss Page say anything about her engagement?"

"They were talking about it as they came in, and the first thing I heard was, 'I have given my word, Philip, and I must go through with it—even if it kills me.' She was half crying. Then Mr. Langdon said quietly, 'Mary, you don't love him, do you?' And Mary said, 'You know I don't, Philip. There is only one man in the world that I love.' Then he took her in his arms and she broke down and sobbed; but when he tried to make her say she would break her engagement she wouldn't, and she wouldn't tell him why she had promised to marry James. She only said that she could never be free unless James gave her back her promise."

"Do you mean to say," interrupted the judge, "that Mr. Langdon knew nothing of the episode of the forged check?"

"No. Mary told me she couldn't bear to tell him about her father. Besides, James had made her promise to keep that part of their engagement a secret from everyone."

"It seems incredible!" said His Honor, settling back, and the prosecutor asked, as if suddenly seeing a new viewpoint:

"Did your brother know of Miss Page's love for Mr. Langdon?"

"I don't know whether he knew then or not, but he knew later because Mr. Langdon told him. While I was still smothered the sobs that shook her thin shoulders like a storm, as the prosecutor repeated his question.

"It all happened several years ago—five—maybe six. Mary and I were very good friends at that time, and I was at her home a great deal. So I knew that—that they were greatly in need of money. I overheard Mr. Page say that there would be ruin for all of them, and that they'd be turned out on the streets unless they 'got the money' before morning. Mary overheard him, too, and when he went out she and I sat trying to think of some way by which we could raise money. It was while we were still talking that Mr. Page came back. He—he had been drinking, and he was waving a check around his head and cried, 'I've done a good turn for a friend and I've been well paid for it. The Lord helps those who help themselves.' He seemed terribly excited, and went out again almost immediately saying that he wanted to cash the check before the banks closed."

"Whose check was it?"

"My brother's."

"Was he interested in Miss Page at that time?"

"Yes. He had always been, I think, but she was not at all in love with him. She had told me that."

"Yet he gave her father a check for a large sum?"

"No." She flushed hotly now, and cast a timid glance at Mary, as if half deprecating the necessity of the testimony. "That was just it. My brother had not—signed that check."

"Do you mean," broke in the judge, "that the check was forged?"

"Yes. A detective sent by the bank came to the Page home while I was there and told Mrs. Page and Mary and me. Mary didn't believe it at first, but at any rate she said she didn't know where her father was, though we both guessed he—was in the bar of the hotel. He was mostly there. James was horrified when he found out that it was Mary's father who had cashed the check because, not knowing, he had already told the police to 'prosecute the man to the hilt.' Mary cried and begged him to do something to save her father, and James said, 'I'll save him for your sake, Mary. If you will promise to do something for me in return.'"

"Did he say what that something was?"

"No. She didn't even ask. She just said she would do anything in the world he wanted if he would save her father. So he went with us to the hotel and we got there just in time to save Mr. Page from arrest."

"Do you mean that the check was forged?"

"Yes."

"What did you do?"

"I returned to the hotel, got my hat and coat and went home."

"That is all," said the prosecutor. But the judge leaned forward and voiced the question that everybody in the courtroom was mutely asking.

"Do you mean to say that a young lady in an evening gown and with no cloak walked through that street back of the hotel and that no one saw her? That you and the police got no clue in your search?"

"Yes, your Honor. Mary Page had disappeared absolutely, and no one knows where she went."

Langdon smiled, and the judge sat back with a little exclamation that was not complimentary to the police; but when the name of the next witness rang through the room he leaned forward again and spoke with some irritation to the prosecutor.

"Is it your intention, sir, to develop through the testimony of THIS witness the whereabouts of Miss Page after the murder? It seems to me that that is the testimony that should be brought forward now."

"Your Honor, the movements of Miss Page between the time she was left unconscious in the room at the Republic until the following morning will have to be told by Miss Page herself. They are not known to me and I have no witnesses to testify to her whereabouts or actions. I have, in fact, been unable to get anyone who actually saw the prisoner during her flight. The truth must come out, of course, and I have in the meantime called the sister of James Pollock to develop an important line in the case for the State."

Again Langdon smiled, and the judge sat back with a little shrug, as, amid a murmurous wave of comment and curiosity the name of the new witness was repeated:

"Ruth Pollock!"

The sister of the dead man who throughout the earlier testimony had sat unnoticed among the throng, was a tragic figure in her trailing black garments as she went to the stand.

"Miss Pollock, you have known the prisoner, Mary Page, for some years, have you not?"

"Yes, we were at school together and remained intimate friends afterwards."

"Was your brother also a friend of hers?"

"He was."

"Was there ever any closer relationship than that of mere friendship between your brother and Mary Page?"

"Yes. They were engaged to be married."

Even the judge sat forward in his chair at the words, so simply uttered and yet so sharply changing the aspect of things. The prosecutor's next question came quickly.

"Was your brother happy in his engagement?" he said.

"I don't know how to answer that question. He was happy because he wanted to marry Mary, but he knew she didn't love him."

"If Miss Page did not love your brother, why was she willing to be his wife?"

The girl flushed and answered less readily:

"Well, you see—there were reasons—and she had promised."

"Will you please tell us those reasons?"

A little gasping sob writhed from a woman's overburdened heart broke the stillness at that question, and Mrs. Page suddenly dropped forward, hiding her face in her hands. She knew only too well what was coming, and the courage that had kept her erect and smiling during the torture of the trial, gave way suddenly at this tearing open of old wounds. All her agony found vent in that one piercing cry of grief.

With her own eyes tear-dimmed Mary stretched out her hands yearningly, half whispering, "Mother! Mother!" and Langdon was at her side in a moment. She waved him back and, drawing her veil across her distorted face,

"How did you 'save him,' as you call it?"

"James told the detective that he had forgotten about giving the check to Mr. Page and that it was perfectly good."

"And Miss Page was naturally grateful to your brother for his having saved her father?" prompted the District Attorney, as Ruth broke off, not knowing how to go on.

"Grateful? Yes. She—she promised to marry him. I heard her tell Mr. Langdon."

"Was Mr. Langdon at the house at that time?"

"No, he came while I was sitting talking to Mrs. Page. Mary and James were in the next room, so I went to let Mr. Langdon in. He stopped at the gate, looking at my brother's automobile, and I walked down the path to meet him. While we were coming back toward the porch the others came to the door. Suddenly James caught Mary up in his arms and kissed her. She seemed to struggle against him and, slipping away, ran into the house. Mr. Langdon, thinking that my brother had kissed Mary against her will, rushed at him and threatened to strike him."

"Your Honor!" It was Langdon's voice, suddenly harsh and strained, "I protest against this evidence as entirely irrelevant and leading up to nothing that has a bearing upon the case at present."

"The court cannot sustain your objection," said the judge, curtly. "It is very unfortunate for you, Mr. Langdon, but whatever brings out the details of the relationship between Mary Page and James Pollock is decidedly relevant."

The District Attorney smiled in triumph. He turned to Ruth, who looked startled at the interruption, and said, gently:

"You were saying, Miss Pollock, that Mr. Langdon threatened your brother. Was there a fight?"

"No. Mary ran between them and said that James had a right to kiss her, that—that they were engaged."

"What did Mr. Langdon say then?"

"He didn't say anything. He just turned around and walked away, and Mary began to cry."

"Was the engagement of your brother and Miss Page made public?"

"Yes. At a dance."

"Did your brother and his fiancée seem happy on that occasion?"

"No. I—in fact, I know they were not."

"Did they tell you so?"

"No, but I overheard. I—was hiding in the conservatory."

With a smothered gasp of surprise Mary's head came up suddenly and for the first time the eyes of the two girls met; but now it was Mary's that were accusatory and Ruth's that were troubled and it was in answer to that reproach, rather than the startled look on the prosecutor's face, that made Ruth add shyly: "It was all just in fun! I had promised a dance to Mr. Brandon, but I had told him that if he could find me before the music was half over, I would give him two more. For I had discovered a nook behind the palms which I was sure no one else could find."

She stammered over the girlish confession, a tide of crimson dyeing her pale cheeks.

"While I was hidden there, Mary and Mr. Langdon, who had been dancing together, came into the conservatory. I—I didn't move because I felt I should look so silly, hiding like a kid behind the palms, and I thought they would soon go away. But—they didn't."

"Did Miss Page say anything about her engagement?"

"They were talking about it as they came in, and the first thing I heard was, 'I have given my word, Philip, and I must go through with it—even if it kills me.' She was half crying. Then Mr. Langdon said quietly, 'Mary, you don't love him, do you?' And Mary said, 'You know I don't, Philip. There is only one man in the world that I love.' Then he took her in his arms and she broke down and sobbed; but when he tried to make her say she would break her engagement she wouldn't, and she wouldn't tell him why she had promised to marry James. She only said that she could never be free unless James gave her back her promise."

"Do you mean to say," interrupted the judge, "that Mr. Langdon knew nothing of the episode of the forged check?"

"No. Mary told me she couldn't bear to tell him about her father. Besides, James had made her promise to keep that part of their engagement a secret from everyone."

"It seems incredible!" said His Honor, settling back, and the prosecutor asked, as if suddenly seeing a new viewpoint:

"Did your brother know of Miss Page's love for Mr. Langdon?"

"I don't know whether he knew then or not, but he knew later because Mr. Langdon told him. While I was still oak or the palm. James came to hunt for Mary, and she didn't want him to see she had been crying, so she went out and Mr. Langdon stood waiting for James. He told my brother that Mary was very unhappy in her engagement, but felt that she was in honor bound to 'go through with it,' and he urged James to set her free."

"What did your brother say?"

"Well, he was—very angry," she answered, deprecatingly. "I—I know he thought it was just interference, and he said, 'I suppose you want her set free so YOU can marry her.' And Mr. Langdon said, 'I want her set free because she doesn't love you and is breaking her heart over her promise to marry you.' 'What is that to you?' asked James. 'Do you think she is in love with you?' And Mr. Langdon said angrily, 'I know she is, but that has nothing to do with the matter. Can't you be decent for once and set a girl free when she doesn't want to marry you?' That made James even more furious, and he fairly shouted, 'Mary will learn to love me fast enough, once we're married, and I shall never set her free. She has promised and I'm going to see that she keeps that promise. Besides, do you think I'm going to let everybody say she jilted me, after we've announced our engagement this way? I should say not.'"

"Did Mr. Langdon reply?"

"No. He just turned round with a shrug and walked away, and I came out and joined my brother."

"Did he ask if you had overheard?"

"Yes."

"Did you tell him of the conversation between Miss Page and Mr. Langdon?"

"Yes. I felt that he ought to know. You—you see, he was my brother, even though Mary was my friend."

"Did your brother make any comment?"

"No, he just flushed up a little; then he laughed and said they'd have to get over it, and he was going to marry Mary anyway."

"Did Mr. Langdon ever make any other plea to your brother, or see Miss Page again?"

"Not then, but Mr. Brandon told me."

"Your Honor!" broke in Langdon, leaping to his feet. "I object!"

"The court will sustain that objection," said the judge, promptly. "Miss Pollock, you must not repeat what you have simply heard from others, only what you saw and heard yourself."

"May it please the court," cried the prosecutor, quickly, "I shall be glad to have all of the answer of the witness with the exception of the words 'not then' stricken out, for what Mr. Brandon said he will tell the court himself."

Brandon! Langdon wheeled at the name, and Mary, lifting her head, turned a pair of despairing eyes upon him that seemed to ask if all their friends were to be leagued against them in this fight for life and liberty.

He could object—could fight to have the witness kept out of the stand—but in the end he knew that he would lose and perhaps lead added weight to the testimony. He fancied he knew what THAT would be, and his teeth clenched in an agony of longing and a rage against the futility of that desire to spare Mary the raking up of these old memories—memories that brought a throbbing ache to his own heart that was only balanced by the bitter exultation of the thought that at least Pollock was DEAD now. And he vowed to himself that Mary should soon be free of the law as well as of James; but he did not face the fleeting thought of the price that might have to be paid for that freedom of Mary Page.

As for Mary herself, after that one fleeting glance at Langdon she dropped again like a flower cut off from rain and sunlight and air.

She would not look at Brandon when he took the stand, though his eyes as he glanced from her to Langdon were full of mute appeal as if he wanted somehow to explain that it was not by choice that he stood there; and there was an aggressive, almost a hostile note in his voice, as he answered the prosecutor's first incisive question:

"Mr. Brandon, you were present, were you not, on the night of the dance given to announce the engagement of Miss Page to James Pollock?"

"I was."

"You were well acquainted with both of them?"

"We all grew up together. I was not particularly intimate with Mr. Pollock," said Brandon, drily.

"Did anything occur to lead you to believe that Miss Page was not happy in her engagement?"

"Yes."

"What you tell us what that occurrence was?"

"I had a dance with Miss Pollock, but—she hid from me and it was not until later that I found her in the conservatory. She was crying and told me that Mary didn't want to marry James and that her brother and Mr. Langdon had just quarreled about it."

"What did you do?"

"I went in search of Langdon."

"Where did you find him?"

Brandon flushed, and again his eyes turned appealingly toward Langdon as if begging forgiveness as he said in a low voice:

"He was in the bar, drinking with a group of workmen."

"Did you join him?"

"Yes. Or, rather, I urged him to join me at one of the tables. I was surprised to see him take anything to drink, but when I said so he answered that he was drinking to forget that he had lost a girl who still loved him, though she was going to marry another man. I asked him if he meant Mary Page, and he said yes."

"Did you remain with him long?"

"No. I tried to persuade him to come home with me, and when he wouldn't, I left him. In the hall, however, I met Miss Page. I wanted her to see Mr. Langdon at that bar. I led her to the door. I remember how horrified she seemed, and how she struggled to control herself. I tried to steady her; but suddenly she went right over to Langdon's table, and several loafers gathered around them. She seemed not to see them at all. Her mind was apparently on Langdon alone. Langdon was just sober enough to realize that Miss Page ought not to be in such a place. He tried to push her away; but she cried out, 'Don't drink any more, Phil!'"

"Did Mr. Langdon make any reply?"

"Yes. He said, 'Why should I stop drinking? What have I to live for? Then she put her arms around his neck, and it was while they sat thus that James Pollock came in. This seemed to sober Langdon completely. I rushed forward, fearing there would be a horrible scene, and urged Pollock to go away. He pushed all of us back. 'I want to get at him!' he kept calling. 'Just let me get my hands on him!' Langdon was trying to get Miss Page out of the place. He did

PRIZE ESSAY BY 8 YEAR OLD LITTLE GIRL

Baby Week Committee Desires to Thank All Who Contributed to Success of Affair.

"Here is the prize essay written by Little Miss Mildred Hammond, 237 Wilson street. The subject was 'care of a child under two years.' Mildred is eight years old, a pupil in Miss Orr's third grade. Her composition follows:

"A baby should be taken good care of while it is little and have good milk and they should have nice dresses and nice coat and shoes and stockings and nice things."

"When babies are sick they should have medicines and good care, and when they are two years old you must not let them out of the yard, and if they do get out some way you ought to run after them."

"A baby should have plenty of fresh air and sunshine."

"They should have a ride every day and they should have a bath two or three times a week."

"We have little twin babies, a boy and a girl, they are four months old, and they get their bath and nice clean clothes every morning, and they are just doing fine."

Mildred Hammond's picture appeared in last Saturday's Advocate. The "Baby Week" committee wishes to thank all who so kindly assisted in making Baby Week a success, especially the newspapers for their hearty co-operation, the merchants who gave such fine window displays, the Y. W. C. A. girls for making posters, the Superintendent of the City Hospital and the Sanitarium, also Mrs. Homer J. Davis, Mrs. T. A. Bazer, Miss Evans, Miss Crawford and Mr. Montgomery for assisting in the Baby Contest, The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., Mr. W. H. Mazey, Mr. A. L. Norton and the Merchants in the Arcade for contributing the prizes, and Dr. L. K. Essington for the splendid lecture given to the mothers Saturday afternoon.

The Baby Registration cards will be on file in a few days in the office of the Associated Charities, and any mother may see the record of her own child.

 The next few days can clear up that phase of the situation.

There was no indication at the war department that negotiations for reciprocal arrangement had in any way altered the situation on the border. Publication of Carranza's manifesto declaring that armed invasion of Mexico in pursuit of Villa would not be tolerated except on a reciprocal basis apparently has not resulted in any change of General Funston's instructions to proceed with the pursuit of Villa in his own way and at such time as he thought best.

Army officials who studied the Carranza manifesto were convinced that it was not intended as a communication to the United States in any sense. The head of the de facto government, they pointed out, was in a delicate political position, forced to satisfy conflicting elements among his own adherents in whatever course he pursued.

It was admitted, however, that if Carranza enforced the sentiments expressed in his manifesto, the pursuit of Villa might be hampered seriously.

Discussion of the possible attitude of Carranza or of the great mass of the Mexican people is academic so far as war department officials are concerned. That phase of the situation lies wholly with the president and the state department.

Great stress has been laid by all administration officials on the purely expeditionary character of the force that is to be sent beyond the border. While General Funston was assembling his expedition "somewhere on the border," three regiments of cavalry and one of infantry were moving to his support today from widely scattered points in the United States. The cavalry was ordered out at his request Saturday night, some from the Pacific coast, some from the middle west and some from the South. The infantry regiment, the 23rd, now at Galveston, has been under orders to be in readiness for several days. It will go to El Paso, and then be assigned by General Funston to border duty.

Secretary Baker explained the movement of the 23rd by saying that great apprehension was felt in many border towns that the Columbus raid might be repeated. It is proposed to give General Funston ample force, both for the expedition and to protect border residents.

While strictest secrecy was maintained by the war department as to the force General Funston has designated to pursue Villa, information from the border pointed toward a force of cavalry, mounted artillery and engineers which would total between 5000 and 6000 men.

Detachments of artillery and cavalry now on the border, have been moving within the last day or two with no more definitely announced destination than eastward or westward. Observers, however, have noted that these detachments are all seasoned forces composed of men who have long been on the border.

It is vital to the undertaking that men and mounts are able to stand the terrific strain they will be under in miles of deep sands that are Villa's great natural defense.

U. S. SOLDIERS
 Concentrating at Columbus, N. M., and That Town Probably Will Be Base of Operations.
 (ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM)
 Columbus, N. M., March 13.—Actual concentration of United States troops for an expedition into Mexico to try to capture Francisco Villa was begun here today.

From the heavy troop movement to Columbus, it would seem, according to officers on station here, that this point is to be made a base of operations. It was believed here that John J. Pershing, brigadier-general, commanding the English brigade, would be designated to take charge of the expeditionary force and would make Columbus his headquarters.

The force of General Pablo Berrani, commanding the Carranza garrison at Palomas on the Mexican side of the border south of here, was increased today by the arrival of 800 men, bringing his force to a total of 2,000. By tonight or tomorrow it is expected that the American garrison here of 1,100 men will be augmented by the arrival of two regiments of infantry, a signal company, a hospital detachment and some mountain artillery from Fort Bliss at El Paso and a battery of the sixth field artillery from Nogales, Ariz. Two squadrons of the Twelfth cavalry from Fort Robinson, Nebraska, are expected later. All save the cavalry from Fort Robinson, which is to go on station here are to be available for expeditionary purposes.

Reports were received here also that a squadron of Tenth cavalry and a battery of the Fifth field artillery or the army from Douglas, probably bound for Columbus, it was expected that all available forces of the Seventh cavalry, 400 men, are in the field in the Alamo-Tuaco district, between Nogales and Benson, in southern Arizona.

The battery of mountain artillery from Fort Bliss is equipped with 12 mountain guns, especially designed for the character of fighting which the punitive expedition is expected to do. The troops of the 13th cavalry, F. and H., which have been on patrol duty at Hermanas, 20 miles west of here, also have been returned to camp preparatory to the dispatching of an expeditionary force.

In striking contrast to the excitement of the last few days, preparation for the departure of the expedition progressed today with regularity and calm.

It is not expected here that the expedition to enter Mexico, at least from this point, will be started for several days because of the poor railroad facilities with which to concentrate the troops. Meanwhile Francisco Villa with but a small body of men, it is reported here, is fleeing farther from the United States border daily and into the mountains which parallel the borders of Chihuahua and Sonora toward Guerrero, where his days as an outlaw began and where to almost every peon, "Panchito" Villa is a hero. Army men here point out that once back in the mountains among his friends the pursuit of Villa will resemble a game of hide and seek. Some officers believe that the pursuit may be a matter of months.

TROOPS ON BORDER

Ready for Move Into Mexico After Villa--Sympathizers are Under Arrest.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM)
 El Paso, Texas, March 13.—Daylight today revealed the beginnings of the expeditionary force which the United States army is giving along the border west of here in pursuit of Francisco Villa.

Six mountain guns, unloaded during the night, were in readiness at Columbus, N. M.

Fifty-seven carloads of battery mules and transport animals, also arrivals of the night, gave evidence that more guns were coming. Eleven hundred men were in the Columbus camp this morning.

Along 200 miles of the border west of here troop trains were reported passing various points during the night, the result of orders released Friday by the war department. That other points except Columbus might be used to assemble pursuit columns was not developed but considerable activity was noted on the Arizona border near Nogales, and also in the vicinity of a small Mexican settlement called San Bernardino. In that region several troops of cavalry were reported in readiness for action.

It is reported that a few cannon had been discovered in Mexican hills facing the American boundary near there, but elsewhere along the line where the American troops were gathering, no signs of disquieting activity along the Mexican side were reported. Reports here that army officers at Columbus were puzzled at the attitude of Carranza troops a few miles across the boundary were flatly denied upon investigation. The army information was that 200 Carranza troops had gathered at Palomas, about 12 miles across the line from Columbus, and that the conduct of these Palomas troops were part of a great ring which Carranza officers at Matamoros, say they are drawing about the desert and mountain refuge of Villa.

The northern section of this ring appears to be gathering in a position to make it rest between Villa and the assembling American columns on the American side of the border. Reliable information has been received from American sources that the western side of the ring has been much strengthened, especially in the direction of the 500 American Mormon colonists near Casas Grandes, about 157 miles south of the border, where Villa's maneuvers have raised the fear that he intended to attack the Americans.

The Carranza authorities have not reported any movement of their ring to draw inward to enclosing Villa, but have pointed out that lack of railroad facilities hampers them in more speedy action. Reports about Villa's activity were hazy.

Aiding the military, other branches of the government services were active tonight. The dragnet for Villa sympathizers in El Paso last night resulted in the arrest of four generals, one general's secretary, a physician and an American.

The generals, all former Villa commanders were Manuel Medina-Velazco, once chief of staff, Julio Pablos, Samuel Rodriguez and Juan Rodriguez.

The American gave his name to the police as E. A. Talbott. The physician, Dr. Villareal, was formerly an active Villa worker.

The uneasiness which prevailed at Deming, N. M., after the Columbus raid, has been relieved by the arrival there of two companies of the 10th United States infantry from Ft. Bliss.

Offers Services of Taxicab Men to Government

(ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM)
 Chicago, March 13.—A local taxicab company operating 200 cabs in this city has offered the war department the use of all its machines with chauffeurs. A telegram sent to the war department today stated that the chauffeurs had all volunteered for service in case of need on the Mexican border.

AMERICANS LEAVE.
 (ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM)
 New York, March 13.—All Americans, employees of the American Smelting and Refining company have been withdrawn from Mexico, it was announced by the company today. The men arrived at Laredo, Texas, yesterday from the smelting plants at Monterrey and Matamoros. Operations were resumed in these plants about six or eight weeks ago.

A TWICE-TOLD TALE

One of Interest to Our Readers.

Good news bears repeating, and when it is confined after a long lapse of time, even if we hesitate to believe it at first hearing, we feel secure in accepting its truth now. The following experience of a Newark man is confirmed after two years.

A. J. Andrews, 27 1-2 West Main street, Newark, says: "My kidneys were in bad shape and I didn't have any control over the kidney secretions."

I also suffered from backache Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Crayton & Co.'s drug store, stopped the pain and made my kidneys normal." (Statement given November 2nd, 1911.)

In Good Health Since.

Over two years later, Mr. Andrews said: "I have had very good health since using Doan's Kidney Pills, with little kidney trouble."

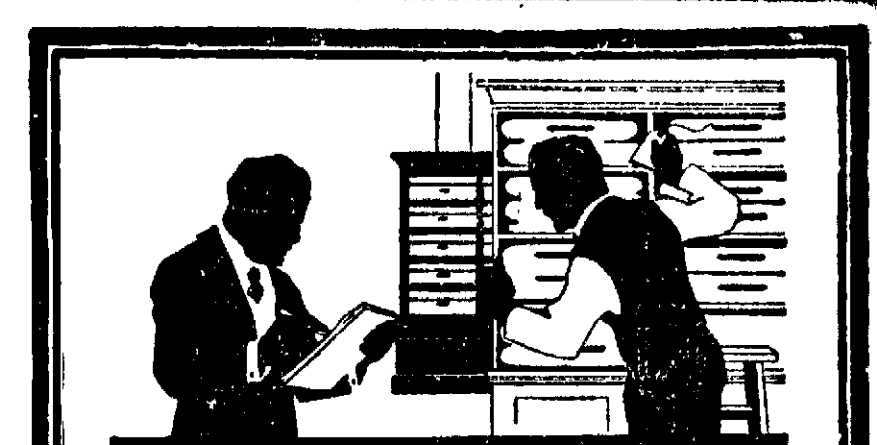

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Andrews has twice publicly recommended. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

Newark will celebrate the spring Dress Up March 27 to April 8.

FOUND A GOOD THING IN OLD ZANESVILLE

WEST VIRGINIA MAN, DECORATOR HAUBRICH, LEARNS OF NERV-WORTH VALUE IN THAT CITY.

Albert Geis, chief demonstrator of Nerv-Worth, while pushing a very successful Nerv-Worth campaign at Clarksburg, W. Va., sent to the company the following endorsement of this wonderful tonic written by Mr. Albert Haubrich, manager of the A. Haubrich Decorating Co., of that city:

"I highly recommend your Nerv-Worth to nervous people. I purchased a bottle of Nerv-Worth while working in Zanesville, Ohio, last September and found it did everything you claim for it. I certainly recommend Nerv-Worth to professional people. It quiets the nerves, makes one sleep soundly, and promotes general good health."

To have available a tonic that quiets nerves, blesses the nights with sound sleep and promotes general health is something to be thankful for.

Your dollar back at the T. J. Evans Drug Store, Newark, if Nerv-Worth does not benefit you.

Federal Plan Advocated by Newark Minister in His Address on City Government

Last evening, Rev. Grover L. Diehl at Plymouth Congregational church spoke to a large and representative audience in support of the federal form of city government as exemplified in the charter of the city of Cleveland, as preferable for any city to the Commission form, which was advocated at a recent meeting of Trinity Men's club.

Rev. Mr. Diehl when a resident of Cleveland was active in his ward for the support of the present charter, which overwhelmingly carried by a non-partisan vote of two to one, Newton D. Baker, the leading authority on this form of government, now secretary of war, occupied the pulpit of Mr. Diehl's church the Sunday before the election, and what Mr. Diehl has to say is from thorough experience.

The minister first traced the development of city government beginning with the ancient cities of Greece and Palestine. He said in part:

"The walled cities of the ancient Greeks were very much like the cities of Palestine. The Greek city was an independent self-governing state. A citizen of one city could not even marry a woman from another nor hold property within the territory of another. There was no doubt some wisdom in Aristotle's idea of the 'small state—simple and well governed,' but we can readily see how such isolation as that of the cities of ancient Greece could soon become the progenitor of weakness and strife: how it would fail of the great enterprises and broad sympathies of a people united on a large scale. You are familiar with the history of the cities and provinces of Europe with their feudal lords. The historical trend in government from the first has clearly been away from provincialism and feudalism toward the recognition of the rights and power of the people united on broad principles of human welfare, but applied through definite and efficient agencies.

"We see here in the ancient cities of Palestine and Greece in its crude form the expression of a principle, the same substantially as the modern principle of home rule that has been sweeping the country and has come to stay. Aristotle's principle of 'the state, small but well-governed,' is as modern now as it was. People are best able to conduct the affairs of a given city, from within rather than from without. They best know their own needs and emergencies.

"The charter for the city of Cleveland provides for a short term of two years for both mayor and council. The main reason why the federal form is best is that it concentrates authority and responsibility for definite action and results. The people can act intelligently when responsibility is centered in the mayor and council.

"The initiative, referendum and recall are made easily workable. Six hundred names on a petition from his ward are sufficient to bring up for consideration the recall of a councilman; twenty-five thousand names are required for consideration of the recall of a mayor. These figures of course are in proportion to the size of the city and here apply to a city many times larger than our own.

"An appropriation of money for meeting the expenses of the city is by ordinance of the council and subject to the referendum.

"There can be no exclusive, public franchise. The franchise may be revoked at any time and the people are thus protected from the possibility of becoming the victims of a powerful and greedy corporation. The attempt of a corporation to corrupt the government has been shamefully revealed of late in the election frauds in Terre Haute and Indianapolis.

"The mayor and council only, are elected. The heads of the departments are appointed by the mayor. This centering of responsibility is directing the power of the people in a definite and effective channel.

"The people are ultimate in power if they have interest enough in their city to make use of it. They are given the opportunity of guiding their city by the definite fixing of responsibility on the mayor and council. The departments are: the department of public welfare; public safety; finance, law, and public service, all under one head and management, just as any responsible business concern.

The department of public welfare, for instance, provides in an excellent way for the amusement, recreation, health, morality, comfort and employment of the people.

"There are two irresistible currents moving in the vast sea of human progress—they can never be stayed—these are: first, the rights of the people; second, the concentration of effort and responsibility. Now, this all means double emphasis on leadership and citizenship. Without the co-operation of worthy leaders and conscientious citizens, the best government would fail; with it the worst could be made to succeed. Outward conditions can improve no faster than the people themselves improve.

"O beautiful for patriot's dream, That sees beyond the years, Thine aboriginal cities gleam, Undimmed by human tears, America! America!

God shed his grace on thee And crown thy good with brotherhood, From sea to shining sea."
—Katherine Lee Bates.

REV. B. M. O'BOYLAN'S LENTEN SERMON SUNDAY EVENING

At St. Frances de Sales church Rev. B. M. O'Boylan delivered the second sermon on "The Beatitudes," Matthew's V-4. "Blessed are the meek for they shall possess the land." Father O'Boylan spoke in part as follows:

The virtue of meekness will be better understood by exemplification and description than by a mere definition. Hence we will first study it in the character of Christ and then try to describe it.

It was to our Lord that Isaiah referred the 42nd chapter of his prophecy when he wrote:

"Behold my servant, I will uphold him, my elect, my soul delighteth in him. I have given my spirit upon him, he shall bring forth judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not cry nor have respect to person, neither shall his voice be heard abroad. The bruised reed he shall not break and smoking flax he shall not quench; he shall bring forth judgment unto truth. He shall not be sad nor troublesome." And St. Matthew in his 12th chapter tells us how, having cured the man who had the withered hand, Jesus was going to be destroyed by the Pharisees because he performed this good work on the Sabbath day, and instead of seeking to oppose and thwart them in any way he simply retired from thence; and many followed him, and he healed them all. And he charged them that they should not make him known. "That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Isaiah the prophet: Behold my servant whom I have chosen, my beloved in whom my soul hath been well pleased. I will put my spirit upon him and he will show judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not contend nor cry out, neither shall any man hear his voice in the streets. The bruised reed he shall not break and smoking flax he shall not extinguish till he send forth judgment unto victory. And in his name the Gentiles shall hope."

5. You will not know how St. Matthew here delights to quote and comment on this beautiful passage spoken by the Great Prophet—800 years before the coming of the Messiah and found to be so truly exemplified in the God-Man. Next we read in the 5th chapter of St. John how our Lord went down to Galilee because the Jews sought to kill him in Judea and while there his disciples begged him to come back to Judea so that he might manifest himself to the world by his doctrines and teachings.

6. But he left them go there to the feast of the tabernacles without him and he went himself afterwards in secret. Now about the midst of the feast Jesus went up to the Temple and taught. And the Jews wondered saying, "How doth this man know letters having never learned?" Jesus answered, "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man will do the will of him, he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God or whether I speak of myself. He that speaketh of himself seeketh his own glory; but he that seeketh the glory of him that sent him, he is true, and there is no injustice to him.

7. Did not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law? Why seek you to kill me? The multitude answered, and said, "Thou hast a devil, who seeketh to kill thee?" Jesus answered and said of them: Our work I have done and you all wonder. Are you angry with me because I have healed the whole man on the Sabbath day. Judge not according to appearances, but judge just judgment." And in this strain he continues his argument to the end; always calm, always patient, always meek. The man of angry passion like the broken reed he did not bruise. There is no one so weak as a passionate man who has not the will power to control his temper. And the smoking flax he did not quench.

9. Who is the smoking flax but the one consumed by the fires of his rage? Such people who are found in great numbers and instead of permitting them to burn out quietly, by letting them alone, most of us are inclined to meet their fiery temper by the same weapons, and quench their character or crush their strength by every device in our power.

10. But Christ not only teaches us by His words, "Learn of me for I am meek and humble of heart," (Matt. 12:29) but above all by His example. St. Paul exhorts us to meekness when he says: (Rom. 12:29) "Not revenging yourselves, by dearly beloved, but give place unto wrath." If anger catch fire in the heart of your neighbor, let it smolder a little. Do not try to smother it as perhaps you may quench the vital spark and thus ruin both him and yourself forever.

11. St. Peter tells us of our Lord: When he was reviled He did not revile; when He suffered He threatened not. (1 Pet. 2:23) and to the man who gave him a blow at his trial our gentle Master replied: "If I have spoken evil give testimony of the evil; but if not, why strikest thou me?" (John 18:23.)

12. No wonder that the great Prophet whom I quoted at the beginning of this discourse compared Him to a lamb—the meekest of animals. "He shall be led as a sheep to slaughter, and shall be dumb as a lamb before his shearer, and He shall not open His mouth." (Isr. 53:7.)

13. Blessed are the meek for they shall possess the land. That land is our heavenly country where, amid the eternal hills and in the light of God's own Countenance—"The Lamb that was slain from the beginning" shall be the source of all light, and where the music of the angelic choirs shall be harmonized by the Cherubim and Seraphim, directed by the will of the Most High.

14. But the children of earth who shall deserve to enter unto that land must be meek and humble of heart, like their Divine Leader.

That is to say: They must be without disdain, without bitterness, without pride and presumption. 15. They must not be sharp and cross, but kind and even-tempered to rich and poor, to bad and good, to those who injure them as well as to those who befriend them. In this virtue they become conquerors like Christ over sin and death and deserve to rise with Him to a life of glory and unending happiness.

Newark will celebrate the spring Dress Up March 27 to April 8.

CITY TO MAKE ACID.

(ASSOCIATED PRESS TELEGRAM) Columbus, O., March 13.—High prices of sulphuric acid, used in filtration of water, have caused the city of Columbus to begin plans for making this acid in connection with the operation of the municipal garbage disposal plant. About 1000 tons of acid are used annually by the water filtration plant and the price is now $42 a ton. City Chemist C. P. Hoover believes it can be made by the city for $6 a ton, saving $36,000.

FOR FIFTY YEARS SOLDIER SOUGHT HIS DISCHARGE

About ten days ago William Benton, who was a member of Company A, 60th O. V. I., and who lives near Westerville, in Delaware county, wrote Congressman Ashbrook and asked him to intercede with the war department and try and secure an honorable discharge. The Congressman at once investigated and found that Benton was wounded in the battle at Petersburg, June 17th, 1864, and sent to a hospital near Philadelphia, and then home on a furlough. He was unable to return until the war closed. He was marked as a deserter. He applied in 1867 for an honorable discharge but was denied and given a dishonorable discharge and for fifty years has been attempting through various sources to have his military record corrected. The war department has now held that Benton was entitled to an honorable discharge and the former action taken was unwarranted, under the act of March, 1889. He was given an honorable discharge and the same has been mailed to Benton with an application to immediately apply for a pension. Congressman Ashbrook enjoys and deserves the record of being the faithful friend of the old soldier.
